Four Taxless Cities Startling News, Indeed Borah Would Forgive An Imperial Experiment

—By Arthur Brisbane—

In Chicago, 100,000 pieces of real estate are ordered sold for taxes. In New York, the best known hotel, with no mortgage on it, pays about $150,000 a year taxes, and costs its owner $100,000 more than it takes in.

Such taxpayers will read with interest that Beloit is the fourth city in Kansas to suspend all taxes because the city-owned light and water departments make enough profit to pay the city's expenses.

Chanute, Colby and Augusta are the three other cities in Kansas, tax free, because citizens know enough to own their natural monopolies.

Query: What will be done about power developed by the new St. Lawrence Waterway?

In Canada, of course, it will be owned by the people, as Canada's share of Niagara's power is publicly owned. What about Uncle Sam's half of the two million horse power that the waterway will produce? Will it become the property of the people, taxed to build the six hundred million dollar waterway, or will it be distributed by "our best minds," among "the right kind of people?"

If you think the American people will be allowed to own that water power, you have forgotten Muscle Shoals, and you do not know much about United States methods, or about ONE thing that is the matter with this country.

Here is news to startle a nation supposed to be governed by financial interests, and run for this benefit.

Because the Chicago board of trade would not allow the "Farmers' Cooperative" to utilize its facilities, the government bars all speculation on grain futures for 60 days. The board of trade will fight the order, and says operations for cash cannot be stopped in any case.

Farmers complained. The board members say the government order is dictated by the election. If the order is not rescinded, the theory that speculation in grain, as in stocks, is necessary to prosperity and easy marketing will be tested. Northwestern farmers are harvesting their wheat two weeks sooner than usual. The Chicago board men predict that Winnipeg and Minneapolis will not be able to handle the business with Chicago's board shut down. The drastic order, said to have turned toward Roosevelt many board members that were shouting for Hoover, emphasizes the fact that our presidents have great power if they choose to use it.

Senator Borah thinks Europe's debts to us should be cancelled, not that he wants to do Europe any favor, but because cancellation would "kill the contagion of modern civilization." Perhaps you heard the senator, on the radio.

Many Americans reject the idea that Europe's civilization, of which we had a sample it the big war, should be "preserved" in American money, and they cannot see why we should pay for a war that we SURELY did not start.

The fact that the allies will steal from Germany, as part of their victory, certain billions that Germany has not got, seems a poor excuse for not paying a legitimate debt, already voluntarily cut in half.

However, it matters little what is suggested, since Europe appears to have reached a "gentlemen-welcher agreement," not to pay her debt to this country, anyhow.

At Ottawa, Britain and the dominions are working intelligently on the plan to buy from each other and boycott other countries, while continuing, of course, to sell goods to those other countries. Canada proposes to Britain that she will buy from Lancashire mills, textile products that Canada now buys mainly in New England. Great Britain, in return, is to stop buying mutton, beef, hides, wheat, etc., from the Argentine, the U. S. A. and other sources, non-British. Canada demands, particularly, that Britain cease buying of Russia.

Everything at Ottawa is done frankly, openly, strictly in accordance with the rights of the dominions and the other country. If the units of the British Empire can deal among themselves, free of the rules of 48 states deal among themselves, they should do it.

Other nations should, and probably will make plans to meet a widespread "closed market."

To say that one-quarter of the world's population is represented at Ottawa is almost true, but less important than it sounds.

The "one-quarter" includes three hundred millions in India, which, in the first place cannot buy half as much as the state of New York alone, and in the second place is engaged in a Gandhi effort to boycott British goods.

The country, doubtless, will arrange with other fragments

TAX INCREASE OF $4 IN BOSTON

Ask 2 Million for Welfare

MAYOR SENDS BUDGET TO COUNCIL

If Adopted, Appropriating Power for Non-Revenue Departments Will Be Gone

Request for an additional $1,984,506 for the welfare department and for $81,478 for the soldiers relief department was contained in the supplementary budget of $2,193,316 sent to the City Council for approval by Mayor Curley today.

Other items were $54,000 for expenses of the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court; $21,225 for the Suffolk Superior Civil Court, $20,000 for additional expenses of the police department, including installation of new signal equipment, and $21,700 to cover expenditures of the welfare division of the municipal institutions department.

With the adoption of the supplementary budget Mayor Curley will have exhausted the appropriating power of the city for non-revenue producing departments which are under the control of the mayor.

BUDGET PARED $531,907.

The budget calls for $531,907 less than requested by department heads.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Hultman declared names of persons arrested for drunkenness or any other cause and who are on the city welfare rolls will continue to be sent to Commissioner Fox.

Hultman said most of the persons whose names were sent by him to Commissioner Fox last week have only drunkenness on their records.

There were no women on the list, he said.

FRAUD CHARGED

A charge that a Boston man, former "star boarder" in the home of a young Lynn married woman, has been receiving welfare aid from the city of Lynn, although living in Boston for a year, was made today by John Cole, secretary of the Lynn Welfare Board, as he started prosecution.

The young married woman will also be prosecuted, Cole declared, for conspiring with her former boarder to get money for his aid from Lynn.

Discovery of the alleged plot was made when the woman visited the welfare officials and said her "boarder" was in need of medical supplies immediately. The resulting investigation disclosed that although he no longer lived in the city he had been receiving aid regularly.

Falling Wire Ties Up Trolley Service

Trolleys on the Lebanon st. and Malden sq. lines were tied up early today when a trolley wire snapped off, causing a flare which many residents in the Maine st. and Everett st. sections of Everett thought was a heavy explosion.

A fire alarm was sounded and police were notified. Officers were sent to the scene to keep the crowd away from the live wire. An emergency crew made the necessary repairs after a long tie up.

GIRL ELOPER OF SALEM KIDNAPED

Peabody Youth's Bride Vanished in New York Two Days After Secret Wedding

Margaret Moran, 19, attractive Salem girl, recently reported missing, then revealed as a secret bride, has been kidnaped by New York gangsters, according to her husband.

Police of Wilmington, Del., informed Peabody and Salem authorities today of the amazing story told them by Edward Dynan, 21, of Peabody, the bridegroom.

The bride was kidnaped from a New York hotel on the second night of her married life, Dynan told the Delaware officers.

He said he was threatened with death if he told police of New York anything about it, thus accounting for his appearance in Wilmington. The kidnaping he said was on July 14.

When Miss Moran disappeared from home July 12 police announced that they suspected she and the elder Dynan were together.

Then City Clerk Charles Powell of Peabody stepped forward with disclosure that he had married Miss Moran and the younger Dynan.

Winston-Salem, N. C., July 25

As a new grand jury expected to probe into the mysterious death of Zachary Smith Reynolds, 20-year-old heir to tobacco millions, convened today a controversy developed over the investigation into the tragedy between the father of Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, widow of the boy, and county officials.

Alfred Holman, father of the Broadway torch singer, charged "persecution" and "self-seeking motives" by "zealous functionaries" in a telegram sent from his home in Cincinnati to Sheriff Scott, in charge of the investigation, to Solicitor Carlisle Higgins, who will handle the evidence if the case goes to a grand jury, and to J. Earle McMichaels, assistant solicitor.

Holman asserted that there was obvious proof of self-destruction in connection with the death.

LIBBY IN SECLUSION.

Holman, who is a lawyer, declared that his daughter was in seclusion, recovering her health, and was available at any time.

He said the inquest conducted by Coroner W. N. Walton into the Reynolds death was marked by "garbled human testimony" which

BOOSTS COST TO PROPERTY OWNERS TO $35.50

'L' Deficit, $14,000,000 Relief, Loss in State Tax and Valuation Shrinkage Blamed

Boston's new tax rate, which will be announced late in August, will call for an increase of nearly $4 over the 1931 figure of $31.50, the Boston Evening American learned authoritatively today.

The increase, which will be one of the largest in the history of the city, is due to various obligations which must be met, among them the apportionment on the deficit of the Boston Elevated, State assessments and the increased cost of public welfare. The relief item alone is expected to exceed $14,000,000 for this year.

LOSS IN VALUATION

In addition there is an enormous loss in valuation of the city to be considered. While definite figures on this loss are not available yet, municipal authorities are of the opinion that it will total approximately $60,000,000.

The 1931 valuation of the city was $1,958,000,000, a decrease of $14,000,000 over the 1930 figure, which was $1,972,148,200 and which was the highest ever recorded.

Much of the expected decrease in municipal valuation is due to abatements granted owners of property who appealed to the State board of tax appeals for reductions, according to city officials.

ASK BIG REDUCTIONS

Petitions now pending before the municipal assessors and the State board seek reductions of $200,000,000 on property valued at $600,000,000.

Another loss in revenue is $2,700,000 on income and corporation taxes collected by the Commonwealth.

The tax rate for 1921 to 1924, inclusive, was $24.70. In 1925 it was increased $2. The following year it was increased to $5.10 to $31.80. The next year, 1927, it was reduced to $30 and in 1928 was cut to $28.80.

In 1929 the rate was cut to $28 and in 1930 was increased to $30.80, being increased to $31.50 in 1931.

BILLERICA MILL ON 2 SHIFTS

North Billerica, July 25—The Talbot mills in this town are now running on a day and night schedule, with the term of operation depending solely upon orders on hand.

For a month or more, the mills were operating with a skeleton force, but for the past two weeks they have been speeding up production and now have two crews working days in certain rooms, on shifts from 6 a. m. to noon and noon to 6 p. m., while in other departments this same day schedule is being maintained and night operation being carried on from 5 p. m. to 7 a. m.

Officials of the mill have made no statement concerning the improvement other than the work is necessary to fill orders on hand, and nearly all mills throughout the section are working on the same procedure.

BOLD THUGS GET $5000 IN RUGS

Thieves backed a truck to the front door and stole more than $5000 worth of rugs, tapestries and mohairs early today at the plant of the Atlas Parlor Suite Manufacturing, 39 Chapel st., Newton.

The theft was discovered by Sergt. William Mahoney and Patrolmen William Whalen and James Goddard who saw the front door open as they were passing in a police cruiser car.

They notified Everett Scheinfain of Washington st., Newton, one of the owners, and after he checked the stock he announced that six expensive rugs, tapestries and 20 mohairs were missing. The marks of truck tires were in front of the factory. The office safe was not molested.

Shortly after the new price was announced, the Shell and other companies also reduced their charge by one cent a gallon.

Ghost Walks for Payless Policemen

With his arrival—the ghost was later identified as the paymaster from City Hall—the police got their last week's pay. It was due last Friday.

From Commissioner Hultman's office today came word that the police head was a bit angry at being blamed for the delay.

It was explained that had the City Hall employes waited only a short time for him to get away from his conference with the mayor last week, the payroll would have been duly signed.

CHARGES IN 3D DEGREE BARED

Mineola, N. Y., July 25 (AP)—Thirteen Nassau County policemen were arraigned and pleaded not guilty today to indictments charging them variously with manslaughter in the first degree, assault in the second degree and with being accessory to a felony in connection with the third-degree death of Hyman Stark, robbery suspect.

Dist.-Atty Edward announced the nature of the impounded indictments, which were handed up sealed Friday.

Five were charged with manslaughter, seven with second-degree assault and one was indicted as an accessory to a felony.

Coincident with the arraignments Edward announced the body of Stark had been exhumed and a second autopsy had been performed. He said there were three reasons for the new autopsy, one of which he would not disclose.

The two reasons he gave were that there was only one physician present at the first one, whereas it is customary to have three, and a desire to have a chemical analysis of parts of the body.

From Boston Maj. Doolittle flew to Kittery, Me., the official starting point, arriving there at 5 o'clock and dropping the first bag of mail. He retraced his steps to Boston, dropping the mail consigned here at the airport at 5:20. His route from here was to Providence, R. I.; New Haven, Conn.; Brooklyn, N. Y., etc.

Miss Washington, who lives in Washington, D. C., made her first trip in an airplane last week when she flew from Washington to Newark to meet Major Doolittle, who was arriving there from the West.

EXTRA GUARDS AT EXECUTIVE MANSION

BULLETIN

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Scuffling broke out and night sticks swung at 15th and New York ave. today as police turned back the radical wing of the bonus marchers a block from the White House. Two members of the radical "left wing" of the bonus army were arrested in the scuffle as they blocked all traffic in the immediate vicinity of the White House.

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Prompt action was taken by police today to forestall a possible demonstration in front of the White House by members of the Bonus army.

An extra police guard was placed around the executive mansion, and police said the men, leaving their Anacostia camp in groups, would not be allowed to assemble or parade anywhere in the city, and especially at the White House.

If necessary, police said, an area of two blocks around the White House in each direction would be cleared of all traffic, as was done a week ago, when a group attempted to picket the executive mansion.

An order to get off federal property by midnight tonight still was in force. Leaders called conferences to see whether a court injunction could prevent enforcement of this edict.

At the same time, their forces rapidly diminished. The veterans' administration up to midnight last night—when the loans ceased to be available—had received application from 5509 veterans for advances against bonus certificates for transportation back home.

ROOSEVELT HAS HOPE OF AID FROM ELY

Meeting With Bay State Chief and Walker Case Action Big Events This Week

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Albany, July 25 (INS)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt is scheduled to act this week on two widely different subjects, each of which may have an important bearing on the presidential campaign.

He will attempt to solidify the Al Smith forces in Massachusetts behind the Roosevelt-Garner banner at a conference with Gov. Joseph B. Ely of the Bay State on Wednesday.

He will receive Mayor James J. Walker's answer to the charges filed early in June by Samuel Seabury in demanding the removal of the Tammany mayor.

WANT BAY STATE AID

The Smith forces in Massachusetts are virtually the last of the anti-Roosevelt delegations to the Democratic convention who have not completely lined up behind the New York executive in his battle for President.

The conference of Roosevelt and Ely was arranged by James A. Farley, chairman of the national committee and Roosevelt campaign manager.

Both Roosevelt and Farley are anxious to have the Smith supporters in Massachusetts fighting shoulder to shoulder with them in the campaign.

Gov. Roosevelt, according to his advisers, is confident that the scars left by the national convention, so far as the Bay State Democrats are concerned, will have completely disappared after his chat with Gov. Ely.

The Roosevelt campaign manager will be sorely disappointed if Gov. Ely, following his conference with Gov. Roosevelt, does not issue a statement pledging the unqualified support of Massachusetts Democrats to the Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

Roosevelt is confident that once the Bay State Democrats have taken a stand for him it will be the means of including former Gov. Alfred E. Smith to stump the country this fall for the national ticket. Shortly after the Chicago convention Smith declared he would support the Democratic ticket, but he did not say he would take an active part in the campaign.

MAY APPEAL TO SMITH

Gov. Roosevelt is hopeful that Smith will stump the East for him and intends to do everything in his power to bring it about.

There is reason to believe that Roosevelt, in the near future, personally will ask Smith to campaign for the national ticket.

Nothing, it is understood, would please Roosevelt more than to have Smith take the stump for him in Massachusetts and some of the other Smith strongholds.

Word has reached Roosevelt that Mayor Walker's answer will be on hand by Wednesday. The Governor is expected to act promptly after he studies the mayor's defense.

The Capitol believes Roosevelt will order Walker to appear at the executive chamber early next month for a public hearing. What will happen after that is a matter of wide speculation.

Until the Walker charges are out of the way, the Governor will not attempt to make any definite campaign plans.

Senate Democrats to Meet Farley

Washington, July 25 (INS)—Participation of Democratic senators in Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's presidential campaign will be discussed in conference here this week.

James A. Farley, national committee chairman and Roosevelt manager, will come to Washington, probably Wednesday, and about 15 Democratic senators are planning to confer with him. Senators Harrison of Mississippi and Hull of Tennessee arranged the conference.

Persecuted!

was dictated by State counsel "with no right accorded to counsel for the involved parties to cross-examine." Mrs. Reynolds was held as a material witness, with Ab Walker, friend of young Reynolds, during the inquest.

The sheriff and coroner were quick to answer the statement of Holman. The solicitor was out of town. Sheriff Scott, commenting upon the Holman statement, said:

"The coroner's jury failed to find that Smith Reynolds killed himself but did say their verdict that he met death at the hands of a party or parties unknown to them.

"It therefore becomes my duty by virtue of the office I hold to ascertain, if possible, the party or parties who caused his death."

Coroner Dalton said:

"It is not the policy of my office to persecute any witness at any time and neither has this been done in the Reynolds inquest or at any other time since I have held office."

The coroner added Dr. W. M. Johnson, who attended Mrs. Smith Reynolds after the death of her husband, gave his permission for the coroner to question her at any time before the funeral was held, as in his opinion she was physically able to receive him.

GRILLING DELAYED

He said he showed Mrs. Reynolds the courtesy of postponing the actual questioning until after the funeral.

"In addition, during the questioning of Mrs. Reynolds and when she testified at the inquest, either her father, mother or sister, Mrs. Myron Kahn, were present with her," he asserted.

The telegram sent by Holman, follows:

"Mrs. Smith Reynolds has not disappeared and is available anytime the cause of justice demands and her shattered mind and nerves permit.

DEATH CALLED SUICIDE

"The plain physical facts surround the death of Mr. Reynolds incontrovertibly establish the fact of his self-destruction, sought now to be overcome by zealous functionaries. Such zeal must be attributed to self-seeking motives ignoring every canon of decency and right and humanism and justice.

"But so was Jesus Christ crucified and Joan of Arc burned.

"If the state of North Carolina ignores the obvious proof of self-destruction, seeking now to overcome it by garbled human testimony which was dictated by state counsel before the coroner's jury with no right accorded to counsel for the involved parties to cross-examine, then that great state is guilty of an injustice equalled only by that of ancient times and the barbarous middle ages.

"Command me whenever you believe Mrs. Reynold's presence in Winston is necessary."

By LOUIS SEIBOLD
Universal Service

New York, July 25—President Hoover may decide to keep the country guessing about his real stand (if any) on prohibition. But some of his campaign managers and other national leaders have no intention of concealing their position.

The President is expected to reveal in his speech of acceptance next month whether he is bone dry, mildly moist or wringing wet.

Unless the leaders of his party who are determined to line up on the wet side are stopped by executive order (or something) they propose to flood the country with propaganda designed to snare votes with an enticing wet bait.

GOING RIGHT AHEAD

Several state leaders are not even going to wait for the speech of acceptance. They have already inaugurated a campaign to prove that the plank adopted by the national convention will insure just as quick a return of beer as the program put forth by the Democrats.

One of the chief arguments they will advance is that Senator Borah branded the Republican prohibition plank as too wet to suit his personally dry tastes.

The Anti-Saloon League, while asserting that Hoover is sympathetic to their cause, complains vigorously against the attitude of the great majority of leaders of his party.

URGE HOOVER TO ACT

Several dry professionals urged the President last week to exercise his power as supreme party leader to discipline these recalcitrants. Up to date the President has not deemed it wise to do so.

Republican chieftains who assert that their liquor plank is better than the Democratic offering believe that if it is aggressively advocated without apology they will be able to hold in line the wet voters of their party.

At any rate, they are going to proceed along this line of campaigning. They hope the President will reconcile his own personal views to a line of strategy they are convinced must be adopted.

Traylor Favored for Treasurer

Chicago, July 24 (US)—Melvin A. Traylor, who rose from a Kentucky farm boy to the presidency of the First National Bank of Chicago, may be national treasurer of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's campaign for election as President.

He was offered the place by James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, according to advices from New York today, and is considering acceptance.

It was also learned Roosevelt favors Traylor for appointment as the next Secretary of the Treasury if the Democratic ticket wins.

Reykjavik, Iceland, July 25—Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau, leading a four-man flight in a twin-motored Dornier hydroplane from the Isle of Sylt, on the North Sea, to Chicago, has completed the third stage of the flight from Iceland to Greenland.

Capt. Von Gronau

Von Gronau and his companions left Reykjavik for Ivigtut, Greenland, at 10:22 a. m. (6:22 a. m., E. D. T.) yesterday, a flight of almost 900 miles over open water. Seven hours later he radioed he was landing at Ivigtut.

MARTIAL LAW IN PRUSSIA UPHELD

Leipzig, Germany, July 25 (INS)—The federal court today upheld Chancellor Franz Von Papen in his "dictatorship" over Prussia by rejecting the protest filed by the state against the chancellor's emergency decrees.

Although to officialdom the decision was of the utmost importance as regards respective rights of the Reich and of Prussia, the general public was far more interested in the political developments of the Reichstag election campaign.

Excitement was caused in all the large cities by the declaration of Adolph Hitler that, no matter what the outcome of the elections, the National Socialist commander of 400,000 Brown Shirts would be "master of Germany" after July 31, the day when the Germans will go to the polls again.

Opponents of Hitler took this assertion of his aids as a threat to seize control if beaten with ballots, but in his office in the war ministry, Gen. Kurt Von Schleicher, commander of the trained Reichswehr soldiery and 90,000 police placed under his control by dictatorial decree, went grimly about his task of "mopping up" socialistic police nests.

Trembling Boy of 14 Levels Gun and Balks Holdup

George was waiting for coffee and doughnuts in a roadside restaurant near here yesterday when in walked a masked robber.

Brandishing a pistol, the intruder cowed the patrons and attendants and made for the cash drawer. Nobody offered any resistance—but George. Knowing a pistol was kept in the kitchen for just such cases, George dropped to his hands and knees and scurried kitchenward.

Just as the robber was about to make his getaway, George levelled his weapon, albeit, shakily, and ordered in the most menacing tone he could command:

"Drop that gun, you!"

The robber turned in his tracks and, as he did, an incoming customer drove a hard right to his jaw.

The prisoner gave his name as Tony Ladamard, 24, and police accuse him of another holdup in Trenton, N. J., in which George Jose, a roadhouse proprietor, lost $40.

ROOSEVELT RUM STORY REFUTED

New York, July 25 (INS)—Through the Roosevelt Democratic campaign headquarters here today, James Roosevelt, son of Governor Roosevelt, denied a report he told Massachusetts Democrats yesterday that his father planned to call an immediate special session of Congress to consider repeal of the Volstead act, if elected President.

The younger Roosevelt's declaration to this effect was said to have occurred at a clambake of the Worcester, Mass., Democratic Club near Worcester yesterday.

"I made no reference yesterday at the Worcester Democratic Club clambake," his formal statement said, 'to the calling of a special session of Congress by my father in the event of his election, nor did I in any way quote him concerning this or any other matter.

Now nor at any time in the future I do not presume to speak for him in any way, unless I specifically so state by direct authority. I made no reference to an extra session whatever."

Fire Sweeps Rail Shops

GERMANY JOINS IN EUROPE PACT

London, July 25 (INS)—Germany has joined the Anglo-French entente "without reservations," according to an official communique by the British foreign office today.

"Without reservations, Germany adheres to the European consultative agreement," the announcement said.

Thus Germany links herself with Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Poland, Jugoslavia and Hungary in an agreement to keep other signatories of the pact fully informed of her international dealings.

SPAIN ACTS TO BLOCK REVOLT

Madrid, July 25 (INS)—Extraordinary police precautions were taken by the government throughout Spain today following discovery of a plot to effect a military coup and overthrow the Republic.

The defensive steps taken by the minister of war were characterized after a special meeting of the cabinet as "actions necessitated by Communist threats to incite a reign of terror," but it was learned authoritatively that the garrison at Barcelona had been ordered confined to its barracks.

BRITON SEES ARMS FAILURE

London, July 25—No disarmament treaty will come out of the Geneva conference when it reconvenes in December unless the big powers drastically alter their arms policies.

This was the declaration of Arthur Henderson, British chairman of the conference, following his return to London.

Henderson expressed "profound disappointment" over the futility of the adjourned conference and its failure to reach agreement on arms slashes, for which he blamed the heavily-armed powers.

48 Hay Feverites Duck Sneezes by Filtered Air

Chicago, July 25 (AP)—Some 10,000,000 Americans are about to undergo their annual siege of sniff and sneeze.

And while they are going it, Dr. Clarence A. Johnson of the University of Illinois will be working patiently to find a neutralizing agent for hay fever that will be within the reach of a poor man's pocketbook.

"I've found something of a vaccine which may be a neutralizing agency," he said, "but the cost of production is prohibitive."

Meanwhile, the University of Illinois is preparing to afford temporary relief to 48 hay fever victims by having them sleep in an air filtered dormitory.

U. S. WILL HOLD CANADA TRADE

Ottawa, Ont., July 25 (INS)—Canada and the United States will continue to be each other's "best customer" despite any agreements worked out at the imperial conference here for greater trade within the British Empire.

This view was expressed by American observers today after weighing the results of the first week of the British imperial economic conference. Probably, they agreed, American trade with Canada is going to be cut into materially, but they do not believe it is going to be calamitous, nor even serious.

Behind closed doors, the real work of the conference began today. Before the week is out, the five committees appointed will all be functioning. It is unlikely there will be another public session for several weeks, until the conference guides have some accomplishment to report.

MA FERGUSON AND WETS WIN

Dallas, Tex., July 25 (INS)—An overwhelming demand for resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment and the apparent triumph of Miriam "Ma" Ferguson in her battle for the gubernatorial nomination emerged today as the outstanding results of Saturday's State Democratic primary.

In returns from 235 of the 254 counties the tabulation revealed 184,686 votes for resubmission and 78,474 against.

Mrs. Ferguson, who served as Governor from 1924 to 1926, only to be rejected for re-election, also enjoyed a wide margin. In 235 counties she amassed 250,737 votes against 178,728 for Governor Ross Sterling, her nearest rival.

Tom F. Hunter, oil operator, was third with 131,759, while M. H. Wolfe, ardent prohibition advocate, was lagging with 16,675.

JUDGE SHOWN TRICK, FREES 2

Pittsburgh, July 25 (AP)—Two Fall River, Mass., youths sleight-of-handed their way into jail and then used their magic to gain freedom.

The boys, Israel Sarat and Francis Finneran, en route to the Olympic games, gave exhibitions on street corners to get the necessary capital. In Pittsburgh they violated a city ordinance to present their tricks and were taken before Magistrate Jones.

"Say, wait a minute," the magistrate said as Finneran executed a trick of shredding a napkin and then producing it whole again. "I used to try that. I get the thing torn, but doggoned if I could get it back together. How do you do it?"

Too Beautiful, She Disfigures Herself

Los Angeles, July 25 (AP)—Where beauty brings happiness to most women, it brought only bitterness to Mrs. Virginia Rae, 27.

Her husband, Henry, was annoyed by admiring glances she received from other men, and told her, "You're too beautiful." She smeared a strong caustic on her face. Doctors say the disfigurement will be permanent.

Cork, Irish Free State, July 25 (AP)—James Burke of Charleville insisted he could kiss the Blarney Stone without anyone holding his legs as he hung downward over the parapet, as so many pilgrims have done.

You might even hear from Washington that we are planning to forgive Russia for choosing her own kind of government, as we chose ours, some time back.

The question most important to the Empire is this: "Can Great Britain, not self supporting, except by export trade, and not understanding economical mass production in machinery or steel, find in her dominions enough unselfishness to make the 'buy British' campaign a success?"

The mighty Empire is making a gigantic experiment. Success would perpetuate and increase its power. Failure might reduce the British Islands to a sort of "European home office" for the growing dominions, or even mean an end of the Empire.

With their present limited strength in money and white population, it would seem that the dominions would be foolish to drop Mother Britannia's skirts for the present.

Eighteen-year-old "Curley" Harper stole cookies from a bakery and was locked up. With consent of the police, his mother entered his cell, took his leather belt and beat him with it, "at least fifty times." So says the Associated Press. Curley, submitting to the beating, said he had run away from home, because of previous beatings, and was hungry when he stole the cookies.

If a dog were thus treated, the "cruelty society" would interfere. If a well-bred puppy or horse were beaten in that way the owner would complain, knowing that his animal would be made worthless, its spirit broken.

Human beings are not exactly animals, of course, but the police, congratulating that mother on her firmness, might better have said to her:

"Whatever that boy is, thief or good-for-nothing, you and his father made him. You cannot change by mere brutality a creature for whom you are responsible."

Mr. Farley, manager of the Roosevelt campaign, says he is sure of "every state except five." It is dangerous to be sure, so far in advance, and Mr. Farley knows that. His prediction is based on the wise maxim, "to convince others, be yourself convinced."

The administration, with all its patronage and employes, backed by the Treasury's billions that can be placed here or there, has great power. Also organized capital has decided that it does not want Governor Roosevelt, and there is one other complication, not publicly discussed, that will exercise influence in certain important states.

Judge Who Approves Birth Control Arouses Storm

Chicago, July 25 (AP)—A storm of contradictory comment has followed a decision by Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude in which he gave the first judicial approval of birth control ever expressed in Chicago.

The decision was given in the case of Mrs. Gertrude Bemis who was granted separate maintenance from her husband, Walter J. Bemis, a consulting engineer.

"It is evident to me," the court said, "that too many children have been born to this couple. The mother rebelled at motherhood. The job was too much for her."

In granting separate maintenance, Judge Trude specifically cited the couple's five children as the reason for their marital discord, and ignored Mrs. Bemis' charge that her husband centered his attentions on another woman.

Commenting on the court's action, Dr. Rachelle Yarros, a woman medical specialist, said:

"A woman ought to have the right to decide how many children she can care for without injury to her health."

Judge Joseph A. Garber of the court of domestic relations, on the other hand, took an opposite view.

"I have found that children do more to patch up broken homes than any other single factor," he said.

11 ARE HURT IN SUDBURY CRASH

Eleven persons were injured today on the new Henry Ford section of the Boston Post Road in Sudbury, near Wayside Inn, when two automobiles collided head-on at a curve.

In the crash a car driven by Barnard Zagarsky of 124 Chelsea st., East Boston, was overturned and Zagarsky, two brothers, Philip and Henry, and a passenger, Solomon Hesed of 190 Lexington st., East Boston, were taken to Waltham Hospital suffering, with severe lacerations.

Another passenger, Solomon Goldberg of 170 Paris st., East Boston, was taken to Marlboro Hospital and treated for multiple contusions.

The second car was operated by Louis Erera, 18, of Wilmington, Del. He, his father and mother, Manuel and Molly Erera, and three other children, Florence, 11; Esther, eight, and Charles, five, were treated at the scene for cuts and bruises.

GHOST SHOOTER HOLDS HOME

Hornell, N. Y., July 25 (AP)—A bullet hole through a clergyman's hat today added another chapter to the story of the minister's old and isolated hill top home. Several other tenants have fled from the dwelling in terror of what state troopers call a "phantom rifleman."

Lieut. Gerald Vaine of the state police said the rifleman, who has never been seen, apparently wanted to keep the house unoccupied, for some reason highly important to himself. The Rev. Herman Lee Henderson took it a short time ago as a summer home.

In a note he found on the well outside the house, the clergyman was warned to keep away from "the well." Troopers say the writer meant the house, too. As he read the message, which carried a threat of death, a bullet sang through the air and lifted his hat from his head. The rifle report was faint, he said.

Later Mr. Henderson learned that at least five other tenants had been frightened away by the "phantom."

WOBURN BOY IS SHOT, MAN HELD

With his head bleeding from shotgun wounds, Adolph Tassi, 10, of Woburn, was taken to Choate Memorial Hospital in Woburn today after being fired upon while he and other boys were picking berries on "Blueberry Mountain.'

John J. Morton, landowner near the blueberry fields, was arrested charged with shooting at young Tassi and several small conpaniions.

According to police, neither Morton nor the children were on any part of Morton's land when the shooting took place.

The wounded boy's companions told police that when Morton was sighted approaching with a shotgun, the youngsters ran and took refuge behind a rock. Tassi had raised his head above the rock, to see if Morton had gone, when he was peppered with the shotgun pellets.

WIFE PLEADS ON BEHALF OF HER UNBORN CHILD

Begs Court to Let Gorguloff Live to See Their Expected Baby

Paris, July 25 (INS)—While Paul Gorguloff, assassin of President Paul Doumer, pleaded loudly that he be sentenced to die, the Court of Appeals today attempted to decide whether he was the paid agent of certain secret organizations, as charged by the prosecutiop, or whether he simply is a madman unresponsible for his acts, as defense attorneys contended.

While Gorguloff screamed for death in a rambling political harangue which the court was unable to stop, his wife, about to bear him a child, sat in the court room sobbing convulsively and begging that her husband be allowed to live to see his child.

GUARDED IN COURT

The defendant was brought in by four guards. Pale and much thinner than when he was sent to prison, Gorguloff bowed low before the jury. He answered the judge's formal questions in tones hardly audible. He looked sadly at his wife and smiled. She smiled back.

His attorney, Maitre Henri Geraud, opened with a demand for the court's permission to allow the defense's three alienists to examine Gorguloff personally in court, but his request was denied.

While the udge, Eugene Dreyfus, first president of the Court of Appeals, was questioning Gorguloff regarding his life's history, Gurguloff broke out into his plea for death.

BEGS FOR DEATH

"I don't want you to save my life," he cried. "I know that's finished, but I'm an enemy of monarchism as well as Bolshevism, because I'm a Democrat."

The court was unable to stop him. Told to proceed with the facts of his life, he broke into death pleas almost immediately.

"I don't want you to save my life. My life is finished."

SOCIETY YOUTH KILLED BY BOAT

The death of George Sumner Barton, Jr., 22, of Worcester, in a boating accident at Narragansett Pier, R. I., yesterday, brought a tragic end to plans for his marriage to Miss Evelyn Livingston Hollingsworth of Milton, it was revealed today.

Young Barton was killed off the Narragansett public beach when he fell from a speedboat and was struck by the propeller. His body was recovered after a three-hour search.

The engagement of the couple, both members of socially prominent families, was announced by Miss Hollingsworth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amory Hollingsworth of Milton, last April. No date had been set for the wedding.

Miss Hollingsworth, who made her debut in 1930, was graduated from the Foxcroft School in Virginia. She is a member of the Vincent Club and the Junior League. She is the great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Barclay Parsons of New York, and a granddaughter of Schuyler L. Parsons of New York and Z. T. Hollingsworth of Boston.

Barton, son of George S. Barton, wealthy Worcester manufacturer, was graduated from St. Mark's school. He was a direct descendant of Levi Lincoln, Governor of Massachusetts from 1825 to 1834, on the maternal side.

He was also a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club and was associated in business with his father in Rice, Barton & Fales, Inc., in Worcester.

LYNN BOY DIES IN SWIMMING

Efforts of an ex-life guard and the Lynn fire department failed to save the life today of George Hesper, six, of Hobson st., Lynn, after he ventured out too far in a swimming hole on the Lynnway.

Edward Gold, a former life guard at Revere Beach, heard shouts of the boy's companions, dove in and fished him out. He applied artificial respiration for 10 minutes until the arrival of a squad of men under Capt. Thomas Whelen of the Lynn fire department and a pulmotor. They worked for half an hour, but the boy was pronounced dead.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hesper.

YOUTH JAILED FOR BAD CHECKS

An hour after he was identified in a police headquarters lineup as a poorbox thief, Anthony Tierney, 22, of Putnam st., Cambridge, was sentenced today in municipal court to seven months for larceny by a worthless check and for evading a $4.50 taxi fare.

Tierney, attired in white flannel trousers, black and white sport shoes and white sweater, was arrested at Dover and Washington sts, after a taxi driver had given his description to police and charged that he had run away without paying his fare.

The arrest was followed by Tierney's identification as the youth who had Mrs. Anna Ford of Meander st., South End, innocently cash two worthless checks for him at a store managed by Thomas Ford in Washington st., South End.

Tierney was identified today by Joseph A. Foley of Green st., Woburn, and Philip O'Brien of Garfield ave., Woburn, as the thief who robbed a poorbox in St. Charles' Church, Woburn.

Special Officer Larry O'Connor told Judge Adlow that Tierney also confessed to Sergt. Thomas Cassidy of Winchester that he, Tierney, robbed a poorbox in the Immaculate Conception Church, Winchester.

FIRE SUSPECT IS HUNTED

A husband who is alleged to have threatened his estranged wife, was sought today after a fire in the three-story wood and brick building at 112 Broadway, Somerville, where 10 persons, including the wife, were driven to the street.

The fire, of suspicious origin, according to firemen, started in the basement beneath the plumbing shop of the Patrick Langone Co., and spread into the hardware store of Harry Socher.

Heavy smoke rolling up through the building, forced to the street the families of Nicholas Liadis from the second floor and of Michael Triber from the third floor, and drove out employes of the plumbing and hardware shops.

Patrolman George R. Gullage, who discovered the fire, reported that a short time before he had seen on the street an East Boston man whose wife had previously complained to police that he had threatened her.

A request to pick up the East Boston man for questioning was sent to Boston police, and the State fire marshal's office was asked to aid in investigating the blaze, which caused a damage of $4000.

HUMAN WRECKS ROUNDED UP ON HISTORIC SPOT

Scene of Many Patriotic Occurrences Tainted by Evils of Prohibition Conditions

The nation's progress under prohibition snapped back like a rubber band today into the face of history, and Boston Common got a black eye.

The immortals once held a mortgage on the Common, displacing the cattle in the young years of America. Later it became a trysting place for those who bill and coo, but mostly bill.

Then, free speech being an integral part of all that for which the Common became sacred, the young men and women who hate all things in general and barbers in particular, were permitted to assemble there and say such things as they had to say so long as what they had to say didn't hurt anybody.

But in the long history of the Common, no such assemblage ever gathered there as that which proceeded under police escort today from under the shade of traditional elms into the cooler atmosphere of municipal court where Judge Elijah Adlow presides.

ALL FILED BUT ONE

They were 32 in number, all men or wrecks of men. They were frowzy and soiled and ragged. They smelled of all things which substitute for whiskey in this era of legislated temperance, but mostly they smelled of ba rum and Jamaiyca ginfer and lemon extract.

They composed the 20th century Boston Common assemblage of prohibition drunks. They week-ended first on the Common and then in the city tombs. Twenty-one were arrested by one patrolman.

The cases of all but one were filed, the one exception, an old offender, getting 10 days on the island, where even the barber shop doesn't use bay rum.

All the ghosts of the immortals were gathered in court to see what prohibition had done to men and to Boston Common. And the megaphone artists of the sightseeing buses were there to gather new material for their announcements.

NEW "RUBBERNECK" SPIEL

"On your right, ladies and gentlemen, is Boston Common, the old Centry Field of 1640. Here the forces that captured Louisburg were mustered; here the troops that conquered Quebec were assembled; here the eloquence of Whitefiel dplayed upon the emotions of the young nation; here the boys won from Gen. Gage the right to coaht and here the great Stamp Act repeal celebration was held.

VIGILANTES IN RUM CLEANUP FOR HULL

By THE MASKED REPORTER

(Copyright, 1932, Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.)

A secret vigilance committee of 13 of Hull's most prominent citizens is behind the drive of the federal prohibition force to batter through Nantasket's organized booze racket.

For five weeks they have been collecting evidence against the rumgraft racket that has honeycombed the town.

They've got plenty. The Feds have got plenty.

Among the vigilantes are two well known Boston lawyers and a noted inventor. They've worked under cover and they're closemouthed, but I know pretty much how far they've gone and what they've got and what they plan to do about what they've got.

And what they plan to do is plenty, too.

A state official and a federal government official have been consulted by one member of the vigilance committee and a report will soon be filed. Then there is an upheaval due.

The Masked Reporter

PAID FOR VOTING

They were imported from Boston.

Each one got a good day's pay for registering and another good day's pay for voting.

They all voted the same way—for a certain official who won and this official the racketeers wanted in office in order to keep the joints running smoothly, not only in the heart of the beach but from the start of the Hull line to Pemberton landing.

A member of the vigilance committee told me this:

"Nantasket never was dry and most of us hope it never will be dry, but any fair-minded citizen who makes this town his home certainly cannot feel safe with the present conditions.

"We know that a certain official was victorious in a recent election as a result of a Boston politician arranging for a wholesale delivery of mattress votes on election day at the behest of at least three organized bootleggers of the type that no community wants.

OFFICIALS HAVE BAGMEN

"Few people in this town vote a straight dry ticket but when we find that we have to have professional thieves operate the liquor business it's about time to dry the town up.

"Certain officials have entered into the spirit of the racket, so much so that their relatives are acting as bagmen.

"If a bootlegger wants to open a speakeasy in Hull, one thing he must do is hire a location from the relative of a public official at a big rental.

"He must also pay toll to the same person by allowing a slot machine in his drink emporium."

BOSSES LISTED

No less than five prohibition agents from the Boston headquarters have been checking Nantasket beach information furnished them within the past month. They are among those who were in the Fed cars at the beach Saturday rigid, keeping an eye on traffic.

These agents have filed reports with Rev. Jonathon Lewis, prohibition administrator for the district.

They have named the men they believe to be the owners of property where the joints are harbored.

They have listed the bosses of these joints.

They have also named the persons who frequent them.

And if they have told all they know, they have named at least two well known Boston attorneys and several Boston officials of more or less prominence who have come under the "spot."

Two of the old-time saloon keepers have very close connections with members of the federal prohibition unit but from where I am sitting now it looks like this pair will be given more trouble than the others who, in the past, have taken whatever little rap there was to be taken.

(Another story of Nantasket conditions by The Masked Reporter will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Man Dragged From Pond Held on Theft

Vincent Walsh, 19, of Sixth st., Cambridge, arrested in Mill's Pond, Waverley, yesterday by police who were forced to go into the water to get him, was held in $1000 for the grand jury today in East Cambridge court as an auto thief.

Charged of larceny of an automobile, the property of Margaret O'Neill of Cambridge, drunkenness and operating without license or registration were made against Walsh before Judge Maloney.

Bootleg Boss Quits Rum for Lottery Racket

By A STAFF REPORTER

Boston's biggest bootlegger, "the fellow who never sold stuff he wouldn't drink himself," has abandoned the racket that made him a reputed millionaire and has turned to new fields of endeavor.

He's gone and gotten himself a lottery. And thereby hangs a tale that's interesting as a study in 20th century psychology.

The pal whom I will name Joe because that isn't his name, pulled a sheaf of literature and a few lottery tickets from his pocket.

"Can you imagine Eddie (that's the ex-bootle's real name) falling for this racket after all the dough we made in good rye and scotch?" asked Joe in a mournful tone.

"It's kind of hard," I admitted, "to picture him dispensing these innocent-looking pasteboards.

"Particularly," I added, "after stories I've heard tell of him handling the rum crews on his boats in one way or another."

SEE LEGAL LIQUOR

"I was thinking the same thing," said Joe, "but I am not unmindful of the changing order of things, as the politicians say."

"What do you mean, changing order?" I asked, with the proper sarcastic inflection.

"Well, what I mean," said Joe, "is that it looks now as though we might get liquor on the legit, if you know what I mean."

"What you mean," I said, with the idea of getting at the story, "is that Eddie sees the handwriting on the wall and goes out and gets himself a new line of goods."

"Yes, and us," said Joe, patiently. "No, because these lottery fellows came after him with an offer.

PRIZES PAID

"It's like this," he continued. "This here Bankers' Circuit Corporation has been running lotteries since about the time Joan McGraw broke in with the Orioles and the funny part about the outfit is that nobody ever squawked about the pay-off.

"So this Bankers' outfit, having got a little pride even in the rum racket without losing him."

CASH BUSINESS

"I believe you," I said. "And by the way, can you give me a couple of those tickets on the cuff till next Tuesday?"

"Sorry," said Joe briskly. "Eddie says his cuffs are all marked up with rum bills and the money's got to be laid on the line in this thing.

care much about the ultimate consumer. Briefly they were a bit weak on the payoff.

SAN "MUSCLERS"

"So, with the idea of keeping the musclers out of their new proposition they come up to see Eddie and ask him what they should do and what can he do.

"They figure if they can keep the new game on the up-and-up and free from chiselers they can do a fine business. But how to bar them undesirables is a little bit too thick for them to dope out."

"So they came up to see Eddie. They told him they had a lot of respect for his judgment because they drank a lot of his rye," Joe continued.

WANT HONEST MAN

"And they told him he was the only fellow they'd proposition on a deal like this for various reasons."

"Did they state the reasons?" I asked with genuine interest.

"Yes, they told him they knew he never crossed anyone in his life and his word was better than a bank president's signature."

"That must have pleased him," I said.

"Well the Bankers' put out these tickets on the Olympic Marathon race which will be held August 7," he explained, "and the fellow that buys the ticket looks for his numbers in the Treasury Balance and Customs Receipts on August 5.

"If the numbers on his ticket correspond with the balance and receipts he draws the country which that number represents. That gives him a $200 prize anyway before the race starts.

$5000 FIRST PRIZE

"Then if that country's runner wins the race he gets the $5000 first prize. The second prize is $4000, the third $3000, fourth $2000 and so on down the line to the last country to finish."

"And what's Eddie's job beside supervising the ticket sale?" I asked.

"To keep the crooked pool fellows out," he said.

"That ought to make it nice," I observed. "Do you think he'll enjoy his new labors?"

"Gee, I dunno," Joe sighed, "of course, I wish him luck, but right fellows are scarce enough in the rum racket without losing him."

CASH BUSINESS

"I believe you," I said, "And by the way, can you give me a couple of those tickets on the cuff till next Tuesday?"

"Sorry," said Joe briskly. "Eddie says his cuffs are all marked up with rum bills and the money's got to be laid on the line in this thing.

SANTO-DUMONT VET FLIER DIES

Rio de Janeiro, July 25 (AP)—Alberto Santos-Dumont, 59, known in South America as the "father of aviation," and contemporary of the Wright brothers in the early experiments of the 1890's, is dead.

The veteran flier of balloons, dirigibles and airplanes, most of whose exploits took place in France up to 1909, when he quit flying, succumbed at Sao Paulo yesterday to an illness contracted in France. He returned to Brazil more than a year ago to try to regain his health.

The Political Equinox Due

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

While national politics seem to have simmered down to a slow boil, it is only the lull before the calm.

The national committees are busy digging their tunnels, the candidates are agreeing with the man in the mirror and the campaign manager is putting tape on the handle of his blackjack so it won't slip.

Things are going to bust out soon like burglars in a tin jail.

The boys are watching for the other side to make the first move. Then they'll jump on them like a barefoot French farmer crushing grapes.

The orators will froth at the mouth like a rainspout in a cloudburst. The candidates will denounce everything in carload lots and the public will wish it had hinges on its ears so it could swing 'em closed in protection.

We are right on the edge of the political Olympics. We are going to hang up new records for parade watching, arm-waving, hand-listening, bad cigar-smoking and gulping the hot sandwich at barbecues.

RUNNER KILLS WIFE AND SELF

Troy, N. H., July 25 (AP)—A quarrel at his parents' home last night ended in Alfred Matson, 23-year-old marathon runner, well known in Boston, slaying his 19-year-old wife, Gretchen, from whom he was separated, and taking his own life.

Mrs. Matson, who has been living at Fitzwilliam since the couple's separation several months ago, went to her father-in-law's home last night to visit her 11-months-old child.

She met her husband on the piazza of the house, police were told, and after a quarrel Matson drew a revolver. He fired several shots at his wife, and Lucy Patria, 16, who was holding the baby, ran toward the street. He then turned the revolver on himself.

Boast, Made Good, Costs Man His Life

Los Angeles, July 25 (AP)—W. J. Kirkpatrick made good his boast, but the cost was heavy. Often he told friends no robber could make him submit. Dropping into a jewelry store just as three holdup men went to work, he was ordered to raise his hands. He calmly turned around to walk out—and was shot dead.

Makes You Lose Unhealthy Fat

Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lose fat, too."

To take off fat—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a few cents—get it at any drug store in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the SAFE and harmless way to lose fat —your money gladly returned.

Don't accept anything but Kruschen because you must reduce safely,

BORAH SPEECH SEEN AS HOOVER 'SOUND-OFF'

Washington, July 25 (INS)—A change in the Hoover Administration's public attitude toward the European debt question appeared imminent today.

The keynote of this change was sounded in the radio speech by Sen. Borah, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, in which Borah demanded the calling of an international conference to discuss the debts and all other international economic subjects.

State Department officials flatly declined to discuss the Borah speech. It was considered significant however, that they declined for the first time in several months to reiterate the policy laid down by President Hoover and Sec. Stimson that this government would not discuss the debts at any international gathering.

Here before the policy of the administration has been that it would discuss the debts separately and individually with each debtor nation if and when that nation made formal request for such a discussion.

When the world economic conference was first proposed six weeks ago the administration made it painfully plain to the European countries it would not be represented at such a conference if debts and reparations were included in the agenda.

Asked today whether this was still the position of the American government, State Department officials said they could not comment. This led to the belief that Senator Borah had again been used by the administration to voice its sentiments on an international situation.

In view of Borah's outspoken demand that an international conference be called immediately to discuss debt revision, currency stabilization and other economic subjects, speculation was aroused here whether his speech might not have been a "sound off" in advance of President Hoover's speech of acceptance scheduled for Aug. 11.

It may have been a "trial balloon" sent up for the purpose of ascertaining public sentiment here and abroad prior to the President's acceptance speech.

Borah's Shift Lauded by Press in Britain

London, July 25 (AP)—"Borah's conversion," as London newspapers called the Senator's suggestion for a conference on war debts, was hailed here today as "a considerable straw in a wind that is beginning to blow" in the United States war debt revision.

"Europe will welcome wholeheartedly so notable a conversion as Senator Borah's," the Telegraph said. "His courage and candor will receive unstinted recognition in this country and elsewhere."

"What Borah says," the News-Chronicle commented, "is generally what the mass of Americans is thinking. It is therefore supremely welcome that he now publicly declares in favor of a conference."

The Daily Express said it was too early "to read into Senator Borah's words a determination of the American people to face the debt problem in a realistic way," but it added that "Borah is a shrewd man and a fairly considerable straw in the wind that is beginning to blow."

Conry Gives Out Another Note From 'Halter Man'

Another communication from the mysterious person who signs himself "The Halter Man, Station 16," was received today by Traffic Commissioner Conry, according to Conry himself, who gave the following written statement out at police headquarters:

"Traffic Commissioner Conry received a second anonymous (the spelling is Conry's) communication from The Halter Man, which he turned over to the reporters at headquarters this morning. It read as follows:

"'Dear Commissioner: To think that the dear old Transcript, admired by us all, was so badly stirred by a simple word it had to face the wall. Apodosis and apodeictical of honorable relations are daily diet for "my boys" in the Back Bay station. We are collectors of words and coins and know the merit of each article.

"'From Protasis and Epitasis the story goes the rounds that you would prefer for daily use onomopoic sounds.

"'Hard gloom fills the guardroom while the horses crunch their hay. Said the black horse groom: "No voice from the tumbrils!" The horse answered neigh. Two thousand coppers are hunting their pay and Duxbury 32 miles away. On the old clams flats at slant of day, the green horse asks the chestnut bays "When do the doughboys get their pay?" The horse marines chant in chorus gay: "Two thousand coppers can't get any pay; Hultman 26 miles away."

"The Halter Man, Station 16.'"

The identity of the writer remains a mystery, but because he wrote of 2000 police being unable to get their pay, where there are only about 100 men, and these all at headquarters, whose money was delayed, it was doubted that the author of the missives is a member of the police department.

RESCUED FLIER BARES HORRORS AFTER CRASH

Mexico City, July 25—Clarence L. McElroy, Medaryville, Ind., aviator, who wandered in the wilderness of the Oaxacan mountain ranges without food for 17 days after a crash in a tropical storm that killed his companion, Roy Gordon of Brownsville, Tex., arrived here today.

McElroy arrived by plane from San Jeronimo, Oaxaca, where he was treated for hundreds of insect bites and partial paralysis of his circulatory system. He was found by an Indian.

FLIER ON CRUTCHES

McElroy is on crutches. He was taken to the American hospital, where Dr. A. R. Goodman, specialist in tropical diseases, will examine and treat him. At the hospital McElroy told of the flight:

"It was 10 o'clock on the morning of June 27 that we ran into a rainstorm just out of San Jeronimo while flying to Tegucigalpa, Honduras, where Gordon was head of the Honduras Aviation Company.

"The rain blinded us, and while we were 3000 feet up we lost all sense of direction. We knew that below us there was a heavy forest.

PLANE HITS MOUNTAIN

"Suddenly we crashed—against a mountain. I awoke in mid-afternoon. Gordon was dead. The plane was a wreck. Everything was a mess, and my leg hurt like sixty.

"I got thirsty and rigged up a piece of tarpaulin to catch some rain water. I was hungry, too, but what could I do about that? For three days I stayed in the plane. I couldn't get out."

McElroy said he thought he could see the lights of a town 15 miles away and he got out of the plane and began to crawl.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE

"As the days went by, I could scarcely move. But I couldn't give up," he said. "I decided to fight it out until I didn't know anything.

"Then one morning I came in sight of a corral. It held some calves. It was the greatest thing I had ever seen. I was going to stop right there until someone came for them.

"About 8 o'clock came a youth—Gerardo Enriquez. He stared, and then rushed to me. I pointed to the sky, indicated I'd fallen, and then pointed to the cows and went through the motions of milking.

"The boy ran and milked one and brought me food that gave me new life. I'll never forget that boy as long as I live, and I'll never be able to thank him enough."

LAST RITES FOR C. E. YOUNG

AGED MOTHER OF ZIEGFELD DYING

Chicago, July 2 (INS)—Still unaware of the death of her distinguished son, Mrs. Rosalie Ziegfeld, 83-year-old mother of the late Florenz Ziegfeld, remained in a coma today.

The aged woman was in a semi-conscious condition and unable to recognize relatives. Doctors reported she is on the brink of death.

In her condition it would be impossible to convey to her the news of the famed stage producer's death in Hollywood Friday night, even though her relatives should desire to do so.

New York, July 25 (INS)—Mayor James J. Walker today made plans for erecting a permanent memorial in New York to the late Florenz Ziegfeld, glorifier of the American girl.

He also told A. C. Blumenthal, whom Ziegfeld shortly before his death in Hollywood asked to take over the management of his theatrical interests, that he desired an official cortege and memorial services "worthy of Ziegfeld's importance" when the body arrived here in about 10 days.

The entire estate of Ziegfeld, Blumenthal disclosed, was left to Miss Burke and Patricia, their daughter.

Unaware of Loss

This is the latest picture of Mrs. Rosalie Ziegfeld, mother of Florenz Ziegfeld, made at her Chicago home where she is ill. News of the death of her famous son has been kept from her as physicians fear the shock would be fatal.

MRS. FREEMAN, OF TRURO, DEAD

Truro, July 25—Mrs. Lorena M. Freeman, 88, widow of Warren Winslow Freeman, cast her first vote for President Hoover four years ago. It was her only vote.

Mrs. Freeman, a direct descendant of Mayflower stock, died last Saturday in the same house in South Truro in which she was born and lived all her life and which she occupied as a bride more than 70 years ago.

Until a few months ago she was actively interested in all town affairs. She is survived by two sons, Warren F. Freeman of Boston and Elmer W. Freeman of Mansfield.

DRY RAID RIOTS IN N. Y. AIRED

Malone, N. Y., July 25 (AP)—Citizens of fashionable Alexandria Bay trooped into federal court here today to tell what they know about recent prohibition disorders in which five persons, including two dry agents, were injured.

The investigation followed disturbances two weeks ago which the secretary of the Alexandria Bay Chamber of Commerce notified prohibition heads at Washington, threatened "bloodshed or worse." The chamber's secretary, George H. Savage, is one of the subpoenaed citizens.

Agents also were summoned to tell what they knew about the raid of Tuesday, July 12, in which two of their men were beaten by a mob, and of a raid two nights later in which two civilians were injured by an agent's auto. On the same night a boy was struck by a stone hurled at the agents.

The investigation was expected to center partly about the statement of an Alexandria Bay stock broker who made an affidavit saying that a few hours after the first raid he overheard an agent threaten to "come back and wreck the town."

Sea Monster Nearly Pulls Down Boat by Bulldog Tactics

Digby, N. S., July 25 (AP)—Wilson Munro and has son yesterday displayed several large teeth and a damaged boat to substantiate their story of a battle with a sea monster in the bay of Fundy.

They said a fish, almost as long as their 35-foot boat and as big around as a molasses puncheon, sped toward them, grabbed the bow of the boat in its teeth, pulling downward so viciously that the craft shipped water.

They drove it off with a boathook and a spear, but it returned in a few moments and attacked the side of the boat.

Miss Palacio said in her affidavit that she lived with the MacGregors for several years in White Plains, N. Y., and Passaic, N. J., and that after Mrs. MacGregor's death in 1931 she became engaged to MacGregory, who later broke the engagement.

Millions Hoover Won in Mine Work Shrink to $700,000

New York, July 25—"Unfortunate investments have combined with generous contributions to war and depression relief to reduce Herbert Hoover's personal fortune from $4,000,000 at the time of his retirement from active business in 1914 to approximately $700,000 today," the magazine Fortune declares in an article on "The President's Fortune," in its August issue, out today.

The $15,000 salary cut accepted by the President last week would have caused an almost imperceptible drop in his total income 20 years ago. Today it means a reduction of about 13 per cent.

The largest single factor in the dissipation of Mr. Hoover's wealth, according to Fortune, was the luckless Intercontinental Development Co., which Mr. Hoover and a few friends formed in 1920 with a capital of $2,009,000 in common stock and $400,000 in preferred stock, of which Mr. Hoover owned about half. This company lost $600,000 on the Washington Herald alone. On its other ventures it made nothing or lost a great deal. Among these Fortune lists the Pejebescot Paper Mills, Klearflax Co., Park Realty Co., McDougal Ship Building Co. and Paso Land and Products Co.

FORTUNE INVESTED

Today, the magazine declares, the final remnant of the Hoover fortune is solidly invested in the best available bonds.

Assuming that Mr. Hoover's $700,000 remaining capital is bringing him 5 per cent, his total annual income today is $35,000 from his investments and $60,000 salary as President of the United States. This is a smaller income than he has enjoyed at any time in nearly 30 years.

Prior to 1900, Fortune states, Herbert Hoover had saved not more than $10,000, accumulated during three years in the Australian and Chinese mining districts.

IN BAD POSITION

In June, 1900, Mr. Hoover found himself in an anomalous position, in which he represented both the Chinese government as chief engineer of its bureau of mines for the provinces of Chihli and Jehol, and the English mining engineer, operator and promoter, C. Algernon Moreing, who had obtained for Mr. Hoover his position with the Chinese government and who was interested in getting control of the Chinese Engineering & Mining Co., the largest single commercial undertaking in China, owning enormous beds of coal in Chihli as well as a canal, a railroad, numerous buildings and sites, a fleet of valuable steamships and shares of stock of other companies.

The transfer of the mining company to the British syndicate was consummated. No action in Mr. Hoover's engineering career has been more loudly criticized or more vehemently defended than this deal which started him on the road to wealth. But Fortune points out that the Chinese managing director, who feared seizure by the Russians in the troubled times of the Boxer uprising, was himself most anxious to place the property under British protection. And that the criticism of the transaction, made in the British courts some years later, was largely based upon the refinancing methods of Mr. Moreing and his British promoting syndicate by which the syndicate was enriched through the watering of the stock turned over to the former Chinese owners.

BOY KILLS MATE PLAYING CLOWN

Cleveland, July 25 (AP)—A nine-year-old boy who played the clown so earnestly that he killed his playmate gave juvenile court authorities a problem today.

Last week a group of boys held a neighborhood circus. The boy who was clown, his face smeared with greasepaint, was making his playmates laugh. It cost a penny to watch.

Louis Sedley, 8, stood off to one side, watching. He stood aside because he had no penny.

The clown spied Louis. "Go home and get a penny," he shouted.

Louis started away, but slowly and covertly watching.

The clown picked up a stone and threw. It hit Louis in the back of the head. Louis said nothing for a few days and played as usual, but yesterday he died from blood-clot on the brain.

Juvenile authorities said they were undecided what to do with the tearful clown they held today.

WIFE SAYS SHE STILL LOVES CHEVALIER

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

Cannes, France, July 25 (INS)—Yvonne Vallee, pretty French actress, still loves her smiling and singing husband, Maurice Chevalier, who has filed suit against her for divorce.

She will not fight the suit, and she will be legally parted from the now world-renowned movie star, but she has lost none of her love for the man she married as an only fairly-salaried favorite of the French music halls.

"It's not a question of getting a divorce," Miss Vallee told International News Service today. "It's simply a question of our divorcing."

Then she added cryptically:

"Our love will be more lasting without matrimonial falsehoods. I know it sounds paradoxical, but it's the truth, and that's all I'm saying now."

Mme. Chevalier has lost none of the wife's instinctive desire to take care of the man she married. She arrived here from Paris yesterday and went immediately to Laboc[illegible].

GARBO DODGES CROWD IN N. Y.

New York, July 25 (INS)—Glamorous Greta Garbo is in town, but those who want to worship at the shrine of her beauty can't find her. Glamorous Greta, not so glamorous, in tweed and dark glasses, alighted from the train which carried her from the west coast, at the 125th st. station just five minutes from Grand Central, where a crowd was waiting her.

Greta was accompanied only by her companion, Mrs. Mercedes de Acosta Poole, a writer who once was associated with Eva Le Gallienne and who shared a Paris apartment with the actress, after she had separated from her husband, Abram Pooler.

The glamorous one after boarding a taxi cab was swallowed up in the early morning traffic. Somewhere she and Mrs. Poole are laughing at having fooled the crowd, the camera men and the reporters.

Greta is due to sail for Sweden on July 30 and there are rumors that she intends giving up her picture career to stay in her native land. But Greta can't be found to confirm the rumors and even if she were discovered she would undoubtedly follow her usual habit of shrugging her shoulders and saying in the Garbo manner:

"I have nothing to say."

CURB ASKED ON FORMER KAISER

The Hague, Holland, July 25 (AP)—Persistent and increasing rumors that former Kaiser Wilhelm II has been engaging in political activities led M. Vos, a member of the Dutch lower house of Parliament to ask the premier today what measures the government had taken to prevent his political activities.

The crown prince and Prince Oscar recently paid a surprise visit to Doorn which aroused much speculation.

FLORIDA PRISON SYSTEM FACES BIG SHAKEUP

Tallahassee, Fla., July 25 (INS)—A sweeping reorganization of the Florida state prison inspection service loomed today as a result of the series of road camp scandals, involving mistreatment of prisoners.

The Arthur Maillefert case, in which the young New Jersey convict died of strangulation while being tortured in a medieval sweat box, made state officials realize something was wrong with their prison inspection system. When other convicts charged camp captains and guards with cruelty, officials became convinced they would have to initiate a new system.

MURDER TRY CHARGED

The crowning blow came when young Jimmy Dennison of Philadelphia lay for six months in the prison hospital at Raiford, Fla., helpless in a plaster cast and then charged a guard deliberately tried to murder him when he made a futile break for liberty last January. Dennison's story was brought to the attention of Governor Carlton by International News Service, and the prison inspection service was forced to admit it knew nothing about the case.

SWEEPING PROBE

Agriculture Commissioner Nathan Mayo, at the direction of Governor Carlton, took charge of an investigation into the shooting of Dennison. Mayo announced he would interview every prisoner and guard at the scene of the shooting.

Mayo declared he would ask for criminal indictments against all guards connected with the case if Dennison's charges were substantiated.

LAST WINTER we all were hailing Ernie Schaaf as the greatest of the great. We were calling him the "Golden Boy," the "Wrentham Dynamiter" and a flock of other laudatory appellations denoting we thought him to be the darling of our hearts in the heavyweight stakes. Most of us clarioned he was a greater fighter than his boss, Jack Sharkey, and predicting he would go through the heavyweight ranks like a delicatessen man's knife through a hunk of Roquefort. Then Ernie uncorked a couple of Lumburgery showings and the bubble burst. As Raymond Hitchcock used to sing in The Yankee Consul, "Ain't It Funny What a Difference Just a Few Hours Make?" Tonight in the Madison Square Garden Bowl abaft the Long Island end of the Queensboro Bridge, in New York, Schaaf launches another drive for a seat in the heavyweight sun. He crawls through the ropes against Paolino Ucs—no—Usd—aw, spell it yourself!—Uscudun, there, at last we have it, with the help of the old record book—Paolino Uzcudun, the supposedly softened up but never yet knockedout Basque Woodchopper. Master Mind Johnny Buckley, Ernie's rotund campaign manager, has it all doped out that over the prostrate form of the Basque Woodchopper Schaaf will step back into the limelight and profitable matches with Carnera, Mickey Walker and mayhap Max Schmeling. Looks as if Johnny was right, for along Cauliflower Alley they say Old Umzi is "ready for the cleaners." Paolino's marvelous font of stamina and endurance is supposed to be running dry. But that's what they said of Johnny Risko. And look what Rubbery-Blubbery Jawn did to Mickey Walker! The best laid plans o' mice and men gang aft agley.

YOUNG MISTER Schaaf's playmate, tonight, Paolino Uzcudun—again with the help of the record book—is one of those poor souls who had the misfortune to be born a quarter of a century too late. If Life's opening gong had rung for the rugged woodsman from the top of the Pyrenees back in the days of the old 25-round, 45-round and finish fights, Paolino might have been heavyweight champion of the world. Yes, this gold tusked, smiling, hairy, herculean man of rawhide and iron would have held his own in distance fights with Jeffries, Sharkey, Fitzsimmons, Corbett, any of those old ring kings of the past. He's the ruggedest man that ever invaded the prize ring. His stamina and endurance were amazing. The trouble was that at fifteen rounds he was just getting properly warmed up and working into high gear. A bit of wealth, gay nights along the Broadways of the world and the rigors of the ring now have supposedly drained Paolino's almost inexhaustible supply of stamina and endurance. A high-powered Stutz or costly Hispano Suissa and a stable of pretty femmes of a generous disposition as long as the bankroll lasts, have softened up wiser heads than Paolino's.

PAOLINO is one of the most colorful fighters in ring history. We believe his training camp at Hans Ehmler's modern Garden of Eden at Hoosick Falls, where the Basque Woodchopper prepared for his fight with Max Schmeling, was the most colorful and romantic we ever have seen. Jeffries training among those big redwoods of Rewadenna, Dempsey whipping himself into shape for Firpo there on beautiful Saratoga Lake, Tunney's training camp there among the pines of Lake Pleasant at Speculator, in the heart of the Adirondacks, none of those beautiful sites held the color and romance that hovered about Paolino's rendezvous in the Valley of The Owls along the Hoosick.

DIRECTLY in front of the rustic cottage occupied by Paolino, and separating it from the Big House, the old Warren Mansion, occupied by the newspapermen, was a thick grove of beautiful pines, spruce and hemlock. In the heart of it was a little clearing hidden by the thick conifers and soft with a thick carpet of pine needles. There occasionally a band of Basque musicians would visit Paolino. In that little sylvan retreat in the pines they played those old Spanish dances. Paolino himself and a dark-haired, mid-night-eyed Andalusian beauty, danced "La Jota," the national dance of the Basques, and the beauty of it, the witchery of it, with the pair bending, weaving, swaying there in the moonlight among the pines to the clicking of the castanets and the strummin of the guitars, made us onlookers think we were in another world.

AND WHEN those Basques, far, far from their native land, with eyes burning with fervor and glad exuberant voices, sang "Arcola Arboris," The Tree of Liberty, their national anthem, it was another thrill. In Basque legends it is told how their beloved queen, Jeanne D'Albrecht, when giving birth to Henry of Navarre, courageously sang the "Arcola Arboris." Schaaf's opponent, tonight, springs from a wonderful race. They are the Irish of the Pyrenees, unconquered after centuries. In ancient days they repelled invasions of the Huns and the Moors, and to this day on the borderland between France and Spain they still retain their own language and customs.

WE'VE SEEN woodchoppers, been a lumberjack ourself, but we've never seen a woodsman who could handle an axe like Paolino. That's where he was discovered, you know, chopping down the cork trees in the Pyrenees by Arthus, the old wrestler, his first manager. Arthus brought Paolino and several of his brothers and sisters to do a woodchopping act on the Paris stage. For years after he came to this country Paolino carried those big double-bladed axes he used to use on the stage with him. Up at Hoosick Falls he gave us exhibitions of woodchopping we never have seen approached.

TONIGHT THE old Woodchopper faces the blasts of the Wrentham Dynamiter. Youth and punch vs. what is left of Paolino's once marvelous fount of stamina and endurance. Old Paolino, they say, is coming to the end of his rope. Perhaps he is. But the old Woodchopper will die with his boots on. That's the way the Fighting Irish of the Pyrenees go. It's an old Basque custom.

HARVARD TRACK LEADER TO WED

N. Phillips Dodge of Harvard, elected to captain the Crimson track squad next season, will follow the steps of another famous Harvard star, Barry Wood—down to the altar rail.

The marital intentions of Dodge, a sterling quarter-miler, and Miss Constance Wentwirth of East Milton have been announced.

Bill Kemble Makes Big Success of Open Golf Win

Althoungh it required years for Bill Kemble, Needham, to break through in an open tou'nament, his initial success, the Rockport open, was complete in every detail. For years, Rockport has stood off the best golfers in the state and opens have been won with 74's and even 76's but Bill Kemble turned in a sub par round of 71 to lead the field last week.

SHARKEY NOT TO AID ERNIE TONIGHT

New York, July 25—Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, will take another fling in the direction of the fistic heights when he meets Paulino in a 15-round bout tonight at the Garden Bowl in Long Island.

Schaaf insisted that the distance be 15 rounds as he aspires to score the first knockout ever registered against the Basque. Schaaf is a 10-to-7 favorite to win.

Schaaf came here from Boston by airplane. He was accompanied by Jerry Buckley, his trainer. Johnny Buckley, Schaaf's pilot, was expected here late this afternoon.

Jack Sharkey, world's heavyweight champion, will not be in Schaaf's corner tonight. Jack is vacationing at Bow Lake, N. H. Schaaf denied there has been any crack-up between Sharkey and himself.

Tony Shucco, Boston light heavyweight, will take on Jimmy Braddock of Jersey in an eight-round bout.

Jack McCarthy of Boston, a stable mate of Schaaf's, will oppose the clever Arthur Huttick of New York, latest heavyweight sensation, in another eight-round go. Huttick is a favorite to grab the duke.

BRUINS NEED LIONS SO THEY GET A LAMB

By BILL GRIMES

After weeks of dickering, the Boston Bruins have purchased Joe Lamb, a two fisted hockey player and one of the best ever developed in the "Valley" from Ottawa.

The deal which brought Lamb to the Bruins has been hanging fire for weeks. The owners of the Ottawa Club, being anxious to get out of the barrel, held out for an exorbitant price for the scrappy right winger. Although the purchase price was not made public, it was one of the highest ever paid for a player and included one of the present Bruins, the identity of whom will be announced at a later date.

Apparently Manager Art Ross is not going to run the risk of develcping any more stomach ulcers from watching timid Bruins fold up in the pinches. He is rapidly weeding out the cautious Bruins and replacing them with players of known courage.

Billy Burch, the veteran American centre ice man, was the first of the new comers. Then came Nels Stewart, from the Montreal Maroons and now the Bruins have Joe Lamb. Burch will, in all probability, be used on the defense He is not as fast as he was when he played for Hamilton and the Aura Leas, but he is still one of the smartest players in the N. H. L.

RACES ON CARD AT SALEM, N. H.

Fast times are expected when the League of Amateur Drivers stages its race meet at Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., on Friday and Saturday, when the Mass. Department, American Legion, holds a carnival.

The track is in fine condition.

May E. Grattan, 1:59½; Winnipeg, 1:58½, and Maid McElyn, will be on exhibition.

The committee announces that Samuel Shaw, Brookline; Mrs. Edith Washburn Clark, Natick; Carroll Anthon, Newton, and Capt. F. H. L. Ryder, United States Army, will serve as judges, at the horse show, which is a feature of the festival.

The proceeds are for the department's welfare fund, and soldiers, sailors and marines from the hospitals will be guests of honor.

With Cossack drills and exhibition contests, the program will furnish thrills.

FIRST BATTLERS IN HEAVYWEIGHT ELIMINATIONS

It will be Youth and the new school of boxing against Age and hard experience when Ernie Schaaf (left) and Paulino Uzcudun (lower) clash tonight in Madison Square Garden Bowl, New York. This will be the first of a series of 15-round eliminations to pick a contender for Jack Sharkey's heavyweight crown.

CANADIANS BAR THREE COURT STRIKERS

Ottawa, Ont., July 25 (AP)—Three of the "striking" tennis amateurs who withdrew from the Seabright tournament were refused invitations to compete in the Canadian lawn tennis championships starting here today, officials announced.

Wilbur F. Coen of Kansas City wired that he, Fritz Mercur and Bryan Grant, Jr., desired to enter the tournament. After conferring by telephone with officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, the Canadian ruling body decided not to "encourage" the striking players and notified them to that effect.

George Lott, Jr., of Chicago was the ranking American star in the tournament. He met Dr. Bolte of Montreal in his opening match today.

Seabright Officials Not tO Lodge Charges

Seabright, N. J., July 25 (AP)—The Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club, from whose annual tennis tourney 13 American men tennis stors withdrew after entering last week, because they felt they were not to receive their just dues in club courtesies has no intention of lodging charges with the Eastern Lawn Tennis Association, it was learned here today.

However, there were other rumors that a meeting of the executive committee of the Eastern Association will be held here. Holcombe Ward of this club is president of the Eastern Association.

James C. Auchincloss of the committee here stated that he knew of no intention to discipline the players, though he added that word has reached here that "the Southern Association may look into the matter" from that standpoint of Bryan Grant, Jr., of Atlanta and Clifford Sutter of New Orleans, who were listed with the strikers.

Stribling Does It Again With Old Wine

Sydney, Australia, July 25 (INS)—W. G. "Young" Stribling, of Atlanta, Ga., today outpointed his fellow countryman, Frankie Wine, of Montana, in a 15-round bout.

(The two American heavyweights are touring under the same manager.)

SARAH PALFREY VICTORIOUS AT SEABRIGHT

Seabright N. J., July 25—(INS)—Overcoming stout resistance by her brilliant, but erratic, opponent in the first set, Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, Calif., led the way into theh second round of the Seabright lawn tennis and cricket club's 45th invitation tennis tournament here this afternoon by conquering Grace Surber, of New York, 6-3, 6-1.

Miss Surber, Metropolitan champion and Jersey and New York State finalist, put up a fine battle against her high-ranking foe in the early games of the match.

Another highly-regarded metropolitan entry fell by the wayside when Mrs. Carolyn Swartz Hirsch, of White Plains, bowed to Mrs. Dorothy Andrus Burke, of Stamford, in two decisive sets, 6—3, 6—0.

Sarah Palfrey, pretty little Wightman cup star, crushed the veteran, Mrs. Philip B. Hawk, of Forest Hills, under 6-0, 6-1 scores, and Eleanor Goss, New York Sears cup captain, a newcomer, of Cooperstowns, N. Y., was the victim of Virginia Hilleary, hard-hitting Philadelphia star, going down at 6-3, 6-0.

A very fine win was turned in by Bonnie Miller, pretty California newcomer, making her seabright debut, whe nshe dfeated Anne Page, Philadelphia, by 8-6, 6-0. Miss Greey disposed of Cecelia Riegel, another Philadelphia entry, at 7-5, 6-1, in her first start.

Austrian Cricket Team Wins at Chi

Chicago, July 25 (INS)—Chicago sport lovers today understood why cricket is to Australia what baseball is to America. With a personnel of 11 men an Australian cricket team yesterday handed a 193 to 137 defeat to an aggregation of 18 players, representing the Illinois Cricket Association.

Scientists Bid for Heart of Marathoner

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Daniel Younger, of Baltimore, 56 years old, today entered the Evening Star Marathon to be run August 20 for the National A. A. U. championship in celebration of the George Washington Bicentennial.

"You really can run 26 miles?"

Daniel's wrinkled face beamed affirmation. His grin betrayed the loneliness of a large front tooth.

"That's my favorite distance," he said, and added that he'd have finished better than 42d in a field of more than 100 in the Salisbury, Mo., tryout this spring but for a lame ankle.

"At 34 I went in for distance running and have been at it ever since except one year—my 51st," he explained.

"Five scientists have bids in for my body. They say I have a remarkable heart."

QUINCY CLUB IN SOCCER FINAL

The Quincy Carsons soccer eleven entered the final of the State junior cup competition by defeating the Lynn Riverside Juniors, 3 to 1, in a semifinal match at Faxon Field, Quincy.

The Quincy team led at the end of the first period on a goal scored by Johnny Brown, center, who also scored both goals for his side in the second period.

Sargent of Riversides scored the Riversides' only tally to tie the score early in the second half, but Brown came through with his second and third to give the Carsons victory.

The winners will meet the Fore River Juniors in the final at Faxon Field on Sunday.

CUBS ARRIVE FOR 5-GAME SERIES

By JOE MOONEY

Still in third place by a margin of one full game, and with nothing more strenuous than an exhibition game with the Malden Athletics at Malden's Pearl st. Stadium on the day's docket our limping Braves have a day of rest today before swinging into the routine against the Cubs at Braves Field tomorrow.

Now that Terry's Terribles have left town with a fair portion of the Tribe's scalp, the fight in the first division becomes closer than ever.

Since all four teams, the Pirates, Cubs, Braves and Phillies are idle today, the present status of the clubs will be unchanged. The Braves trail the Cubs by two full games, and the Pirates have a 4½-game lead over the Chicago club.

A single day off is not much of a vacation for the crippled Tribe, with Shires, Knothe and Urbanski all in need of attention from the club medico.

Hornsby's team is here for a four-day stay, in which five games will be played, weather permitting. A single game will open the series tomorrow, followed by a doubleheader on Wednesday and singletons on Thursday and Friday.

With the Braves more than a little off their usual at-home style, it will cause McKechnie no sleepless nights if the Cubs exhibit their typical away from home type of ball.

CUBS WEAK ON ROAD

Chicago is almost notoriously a poor club when playing on diamonds other than its own Wrigley Field, where it humbled the league leading Pirates yesterday. While away, .500 baseball is considered by the Cubs as not only good, but practically perfect.

It was a bitter blow to the McKechnie men, and some 15,000 Sabbath worshippers, when the Braves could do no better than split the second and final doubleheader with the Giants.

Overcoming a two-run lead with as many counters in the third gave our stalwarts heart enough to go on and win the first game of the twin bill, 4-3.

A mighty triple by Fred Fitzsimmons into the farthest reaches of right field to score Eddie Marshall put the Giants up a notch in the seventh, but the Braves came from behind in their half to tie the score when Maranville tripled and came home on Leach's single.

EARL CLARK SCORES

In the eighth, Pinky Hargrave and Old Tom Zachary singled, the former taking third on the latter's timely effort. Earl Clark ran for Hargrave and scored when Wes Schulmerich, pinch-hitting for Fred Leach, rapped relief Pitcher Carl Hubbell's first offering for a single.

The second half of the program was a sad one to relate.

Although the Braves collected an even dozen bingles off Herman Bell, the unlucky 13 hits which the Giants netted from Brandt, Seibold, Pruett et al., were sufficient to send the Terrys home happy 7-3.

Four runs in the first, two in the third and another in the fourth were hung up before the Braves tallied at all. In the fourth however, Berger came home on Moore's flyout.

The home boys rallied from this blow in the last of the ninth and collected two tallies with two down, Schulmerich and Maranville scoring.

Maranville and Hughie Critz engaged in snappy repartee throughout the twin bill, much to the amusement of an otherwise saddened populace.

So What?

—By JOE MOONEY—

Bill McKechnie pulled one of the neatest tricks of the week by asking Bill Terry to trade the Giants' first baseman for Wally Berger. The best answer that the puzzled Terry could make was that he would think it over with himself.

It's quite a problem. You start as manager and first sacker. Then you swap yourself for Berger, and you're not the manager any more.

And what about McKechnie? He'll have to play center for the Braves. Or first base for the Giants. Or maybe he could be out in left field with Terry, with one glove between them.

And that brings us back to Worthington. Or is it Berger? Well, McKechnie, then. All right, Terry. Have it your own way.

Einstein! Einstein!

FINNS THREATEN U. S. TRACK SUPREMACY

U. S. CLASS IS THREATENED BY FINLAND

By FRANK G. MENKE

Los Angeles, July 25 (INS)— "Those Finns," mused Lawson Robertson, tweaking a solemn and furrowed brow, "are going to cause us plenty of headaches. I would say that they may cause us so many of the aforesaid headaches that 18 headache powder institutions will be passing out extra dividends with what we will chuck forth to buy their cures."

The boss coach of the American Olympic team shifted from the brow tweak and tried out an ear lobe.

"In the olden days," he added, "the championship of nations was decided via the point system, hereby tallies were awarded to all the lads finishing among the first six. Because we had a preponderance of athletes, we used to become exhausted from the effort of reaching out for the titular cups and such.

"But the point system is like the dodo or good ale. It simply ain't any more. There are no national champions now. Just individual titleholders. And even though the Olympiad is being held right here on our own terra firma and we have over 300 athletes primed to toss back the foreign thrust, it is not at all certain that we will win more first places than those Finns.

CRACKS WORLD RECORD

"Matti Jarvinen tossed the javelin 248 feet the other day just in the spirit of good, clean fun. He wasn't really trying. Yet the distance cracked the existing world's record by nearly 10 feet, it bettered the best any American has done by about 27 feet and the javelin contest can be considered officially conceded, with Matti the chieftain of them all.

"Matti's brother, Achilles, has hung up the world's decathlon mark and seems a certainty to win that event. If he should flunk it there's his classmate, Paavo Yrjola, lurking in the background. Paavo is a lurker de luxe. He won the event in 1928 almost without taking off his outside rompers.

"The Finns will shoot H. E. Larva right back at us in the 1500 meters. He won the event in 1928. Teaming with him will be Eino Purje, who finished third. I can't think of anybody offhand, nor even after considerable cogitating, who can take the measure of Larva of 1928 and I hear he has improved.

NURMI SURE WINNER

"If Paavo Nurmi runs in the Marathon that will be another Finn victory. If he doesn't, it will be an open race, but a Finn will be there or thereabouts at the finish.

"Those Finns seem certain to win the 5000-meter and there's no one in sight comparable with them at 10,000 meters.

"Joe McCluskey, of our side, is quite a lad at the 3000 steeplechase job, but the Finns will be in that and pressing him to the limit. I don't know who they'll send in the 50,000 meters walk, but any Finn that goes, can be counted upon to walk everything else into fainting spells.

"And the Finns have a chance in the discus.

"So, of the 23 events, the Finns seem to have five absolutely cinched and are pretty sure of three more.

"What about us? Well, we should win the 110-meter hurdle without trouble. I think we will take down the 1600-meter relay honors. The same thing goes in the high jump and the pole vault. But that is all we can count on with absolute confidence.

"We have a great chance in the 400 meters, an outside chance in the 800, we might win the running broad jump, and maybe we can snare either the discus or the shotput, although the odds are against us.

"So, in the summing up, we find the Finns have five events at their mercy and probably victories in three others, whereas the best we can count on is four certainties and seven possibilities, the latter including the 100 and ...-meter dashes."

Vanitie Victor Over Weetamoe

Marblehead, July 25 — Vanitie won in the Sunday race of a series of duels the two ex-cup defense candidates are sailing and now the score is Weetamoe six victories and Vanitie five.

The race, out on the open waters of Massachusetts Bay, was the second of the special matches arranged by Vice Commodore Richard DeB. Boardman of the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Ouimet's Lost Golf Clubs Found

Under circumstances as mysterious as their disappearance almost two weeks ago, the bag of matched clubs which are the pride and joy of Francis Ouimet's golf life were returned to Francis today.

Francis Ouimet

The clubs were delivered at the Unicorn Clubhouse at Stoneham, postmarked Derry, N. H. This shipping point is only a few miles from the spot where Gene Dennis of psychic fame said the clubs would be found.

The conscious-stricken person who returned who returned the missing clubs left no indication of his identity. The clubs were returned to the Unicorn Club in perfect shape.

Last Monday, a friend of Oimet asked Miss Dennis where the missing clubs were. The girl psychic said that she saw them in an automobile going through Northampton. N. H. Northampton is just six miles from Derry, N. H.

Jap Backstroke Star Breaks World Record

Los Angeles, July 24 (AP)—Masaji Kiyokawa, Japanese backstroke star, bettered the world's record for 100 meters today by swimming the distance in 1 minute 9.2 seconds.

SPORTS FOES IN HARMONY AT VILLAGE

Los Angeles, July 25—The Olympic Village, which sprawls over the hilltops six miles from the center of Los Angeles, is unique in all sporting history.

In its 550 bungalows are housed the stars of 38 countries. National differences are forgotten as 2000 live together in comfort and harmony. It houses men athletes exclusively.

To guarantee privacy for the stars, there are special village police.

Although the Olympians sometimes find the strict rules irksome, they really like it in the end. Representatives of all the nations fraternize together.

Some Japanese hauled Dr. Pat O'Callaghan of Ireland away from his bungalow to show him two of their hammer throwers who were reported able to toss the ball 180 feet.

Paavo Nurmi of Finland gets his medical advice from Dr. Paul Martin of Switzerland. Racial and national differences are absent in the Olympic village. The athletes train together and live together. This is truly an international settlement.

LEO LARIVEE TACKLES PIAZZA

Jeff Dickson has cabled from dear old Paris that he wants the winner of the Leo Larivee-Odonne Piazza bout, which will be staged at Fenway Park tomorrow night by the Argonne A. A., for a tussle with Marcel Thil who has claimed the world's middleweight title since he won on a foul from Gorilla Jones.

Dickson is probably rooting for Piazza to grab the duke as the Italian youngster would be a better card in Europe than Larivee.

Jeff, however, cannot get away from the fact Larivee has twice beaten Piazza, and therefore has better than an even chance of repeating.

Tony Travers of New Haven will take a few punches at Eino Nyholm of Maynard in the semifinal of eight rounds.

In the four rounders, Eddie Jessup of Torrington, Ct., will oppose Chet Lanier of Cambridge, Kid Cocoa of Palm Beach will take on Pete Herman of Roxbury.

'GOOFY' DOES IT AGAIN; BLUFF STANDS UP

The Yankees must be chuckling today. And is "Lefty" Gomez, better known as "Goofy, the Clever Castilian." Likewise Joseph Vincent McCarthy, manager of the Yanks. But not Cornelius McGillicuddy. And certainly not Robert Moses Grove.

All season McCarthy has been bluffing Mack.

"Come on, throw that big country southpaw of yours (he meant Grove) in there against my Goofy Castilian. We'll draw a lot of dough at the gate and we'll see what happens. My Goofy Gomez is the best southpaw in the league and I'd like to prove it to you. Come on, Mr. Mack, let's go!"

That's what McCarthy had been telling Mack all season. But it wasn't until yesterday thah it became possible.

TOO TOUGH FOR A'S

Gomez had been too tough for the A's all season, knocking them off five straight times. And at no time was Mr. Mack anxious to risk Grove against this skinny second-year youngster who threw 'em in there against the A's and grinned his defiance. But he couldn't help it yesterday. Earnshaw had gone the day before. Walberg the day before that. Double-headers had wrecked Mack's staff. It was up to Grove it was, and too bad, too. Those high-riding Yanks rode the great southpaw for 11 hits and 9 runs while the best the A's could do off the Clever Castilian (Goofy to you, was 7 hits and 3 runs.

Mr. McCarthy would like a few more goofy pitchers like Gomez, the goofier the better.

NATS HAMMER SOX HURLERS TO WIN, 12-6

Washington, July 25 (US)—The Senators went on a battting spree here and hammered a quintet of Boston hurlers for a 12-to-6 win.

The Nats banged out 18 hits, including two triples, a double and a single by Joe Cronin.

The Sox will hop the rattlers today for Chicago, where they play a three-game series before swinging out to St. Louis for five games.

Marty McManus' boys will not see home until August 12, when they open a home stay with Connie Mack's Athletics.

The Red Sox Hit Tom Thomas for 13 hits, totaling 24 bases, to register six runs, but the five hurlers McManus sent into action yielded 18 safeties.

Dale Alexander did his part, a triple and home run, driving in half of his team's tallies, but he could not cope with the artillery laid down against Larry Boerner, Bob Weiland, Johnny Michaels, Ed Gallagher and Paul Andrews.

Mr. Boston

—By JACK CONWAY—

PROMOTERS OF wrestling shows should be compelled to take precautions which will protect the safety of the spectators. At Salem the other night three persons at the ringside were beaned by bottles tossed by popeyed fans when a tussle between Jim Browning and Pat McGill ended in a free-for-all fight.

There were similar occurrences at the Boston Garden last winter, but Dick Dunn realized the seriousness of the situation and took action which stopped the rioting.

Mr. Boston

Persons who toss dangerous missiles at wrestling shows or other sporting events should be dealt with harshly by the authorities. Promoters should make it their duty to see that the guilty persons are apprehended.

I CAN REMEMBER when the proper thing to do at a ball game in St. Louis when a close decision was given against the home team was to toss a pop bottle at the offending umpire. In many cases spectators, instead of the umpire, were hit by the bottles. For a time it was found necessary to serve all liquid refreshments in paper containers.

CANADIAN HOCKEY fans who occupied balcony seats became so hostile and threw so many things at officials and players that the management of the clubs put wire in front of the balconies. Similar measures were under consideration following hockey mixups at the Garden. When the offending fans were informed the management planned to cage them in, they stopped their dangerous and cowardly practices.

I HAVE SOME respect for the fanatic who will bust his way through a flock of police, like a 150-pounder did at a wrestling show at the Garden last winter, and punch a sturdy athlete on the chin. This bird took a few chances himself. A person who throws a bottle from a balcony or a ringside location is just plain "yellow." He should be taken into a dark alley and given a sound thrashing.

CHARLEY STRACK dropped into the office to say hello. He also told me he wanted another bout with "Gentleman" Jack Washburn. Strack was burning up over the report that Washburn is to be given a crack at Gus Sonnenberg when the latter gets back into action. He believes he should be permitted to settle his score with Washburn before the latter is tossed into the ring with the old Dynamiter.

WASHBURN TOLD Professor Rogers that Jack Dempsey cured him of a desire to become heavyweight boxing star.

"I met Dempsey in a four-round exhibition in a Los Angeles theater just after the Tiger dropped Firpo," said Washburn. "Early in the first round, Dempsey scored with a left hook to the jaw. I felt as if somebody had shot an electric current into my body.

MACK READY TO PUT 6 A'S ON BLOCK

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Writer

New York, July 25 (INS)—Mr. Al Simmons, the champion hitter, is about through with Philadelphia and, Philadelphia with him. So, it seems, are Mr. George Earnshaw, who could pitch if he would, and Mr. Rube Walberg, who would but can't.

I also hear disquieting reports about Mr. Max Bishop, who is the second baseman, and Mr. Bing Miller, who was the right fielder. He is now the substitute right fielder, so if he'll only apply himself and study at night, he's liable to be a big success in Chattanooga.

MACK'S SECRET THOUGHTS

The Philadelphia Athletics were with us yesterday only long enough to lose another ball game to the Yankees, but gossip is a strident tout and bad news has wings. It said, among other things, that Mr. Cornelius Mack, the—eh—tall tactician, is preserving a bold front to the world but that secretly he thinks the club that has won three times for him will now win no more, although just how one goes about learning what Mr. Mack secretly thinks I forgot to ascertain. Maybe the man does his secret thinking in a department store window.

It also said that if the Athletics come on from this point to win the pennant, some of the above men will stay. If the Athletics do not, all of them will go and perhaps a few others will accompany them, by way of emphasis and for good measure.

I don't profess to speak with authority here, but I did hear the name of Mr. Mule Haas, the centerfielder, mentioned in this connection.

WON'T WAIT TOO LONG

So apparently Mr. Mack is prepared to tear down overnight the thing he built up, year by patient year. The last time, back in 1914, he waited too long and some of the boys got old while he was still looking at them, notably Bender, Plank, Coombs, Lapp, Oldring, and Eddie Murphy. This time, he'll make his move while the dice are still rolling.

Simmons, for instance, was a great man with a great club, but he doesn't improve with a loser.

Earnshaw, it seems, never had a real chance in life. He was born to the aristocracy and it is feared that his recovery is not altogether complete. He thinks baseball is a very comical profession. On second thought, I wonder if Mr. Earnshaw is really the irresponsible man they say he is. Maybe he's a student of human nature and just can't stop laughing.

Walberg, of course, has been a marked man for years. He thinks he can't win and he's not so dumb, at that, for more than half the time he's right. As for Bishop and Miller, they're just two other guys who are out there wearing half-column pants.

JUNIOR GOLF ON CARD

YOUNGSTERS BATTLE AT WOLLASTON

By BILL GRIMES

Three major tournaments, the Massachusetts junior championships, the Plymouth C. C. women's invitation and the Jaques Cup are the high light attractions in local golf this week.

Today's N. E. P. G. O. amateur-pro at Oak Bluffs and the two day Amesbury open compose the remainder of the bill.

Over 150 youngsters will play in the qualifying round of the junior championship at Wollaston on Wednesday. Although many of the stars who featured in last year's junior championship at Sandy Burr, including Bill Donnelly, the titleholder, Wilfred Crossley, and John Quinn are now ineligible, the field will be one of the best in years.

Like most of the courses, Wollaston has been badly burned during the extended dry spell and there is a rumor in circulation that the M. G. A. will order the contestants to play preferred lies.

HUNTER, OGG AMONG BEST

Bobby Hunter, Albemarle; Wilfred Ogg, Worcester; Arthur V. Rogers, Jr., Scituate; Tommie Quinn, Chestnut Hill; Bill Murphy, Salem; Bobby Hopkins, Wollaston; Dick Ruggles, Stoney Brae, and Dave Walsh, Walpole, are among the outstanding juniors who will battle for Bill Donnelly's crown.

In all junior championships, unknowns crop up and usually upset some of the stars. In all probability, a few of the more prominent youngsters will be toppled by lesser lights at Wollaston.

The 32 low scorers of the qualifying round will start match play at Wollaston on Thursday and after two rounds on Thursday and Friday, the finals will be played Saturday morning.

WOMEN PLAY AT PLYMOUTH

The Plymouth Country Club women's invitation medal and match play tournament will get underway with an 18-hole qualifying round on Wednesday. With few exceptions all of the leading Mass. Women's Golf Association players will participate, as will a number of out of state players who are summering on the Cape.

At The Country Club next Thursday, the annual Jaques cup tournament opens with an 18-hole qualifying round. The low 16 teams play in the championship flight.

Charlie Clare and Frank Ross, a Connecticut team, won the Jaques cup last year, but they will not be able to defend.

Fish and Game

By WIN BROOKS

Not all of fishing is fish. The memories that eternize the days afield are not always of the big one creeled. Some of the happiest are those of expeditions when only the black flies bit; at least they are numbered among the most vivid.

A. B. Thorn, State st. banker, is back from a New Brunswick trout, ing trek. Pocologan pond was the goal. It is in the wilderness 20 miles from St. George. There squaretails as big as codfish come to the fly, and there, last year, Thorn took his limit. But not this year.

"I packed in with Jack Armstrong as guide," Thorn relates. "There's no road and there's no path; you just hump through woods and brush and bog. It was blowing and cold when we reached the lake. There are no canoes or boats in there. If you fish, you fish from a raft. But it was blowing too hard to go out on a raft.

"The next day it blew harder and it grew colder. With the wind behind you, you could throw a fly from shore but it hit the back of your neck on the back cast. Into the wind you couldn't throw a lead weight.

"That night there was a frost—a July frost with the ground white in the morning. And all the next day it was colder and the wind blew harder. And I did not have any more time so we packed up and came out. We didn't catch anything."

Mrs. Tom Robertson, one of Boston's fair disciples of Walton, had an experience while fishing Kezar lake last week which has some of the old-timers dumbfounded. She got a heavy strike while fishing in about 30 feet of water for bass, using a small green meadow frog as bait. The fish broke water almost at once, flashing silver in the sun.

"Salmon!" chorused Mrs. Robertson, Mr. Robertson, and the guide. And so it proved. He broke water twice more, the last time close to the boat but he was lighthooked and never brought to net.

Otherwise a five-pound salmon might now be in a taxidermist's hands being prepared for mounting—with a frog in his mouth.

N. E. GUNNERS SATISFIED

General satisfaction with dates set for the season on ducks and geese by the biological survey, and approved by President Hoover, is expressed by New England gunners.

With a two months season, not everybody will be pleased but the Oct. 15-Dec. 15 period comes as close to pleasing everyone as possible. The early coot shooters get a break and unless we experience an unusually mild fall, the flight geese will be down before the season ends and there should be some brant shooting.

The right of the individual states to select their own open season dates, for which President John C. Phillips and Arthur B. Harlow of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Association have been fighting, is not yet won, however, and it remains to be seen whether the number of live decoys is again to be limited.

The Charles river, downstream from the Spring st. bridge, Dedham, towards Newton, is giving up some good bass and pickerel. Ed Mulvey, the South Boston angler, is taking his share. It's an ideal spot for the business-man angler who belongs to the "twilight league." Any of the lads at the canoe clubs will act as guides.

Charles Ives, the Malden angler and setter breeder, has forsaken his New Hampshire trout stream for Lake Sunapee and its heavy small-mouths.

Atlantic Tuna Club reports the first tuna catches two-three hours southeast of Block Island. The fish are running from 20 to 40 pounds and taking those Japanese lures, which look like small feather dusters, trolled at about four miles an hour.

At Nantucket and at Edgartown on Marthas Vineyard big blues are being taken, trolling off-shore and fishing through the surf. In order that the commercial boats won't spoil the sport seining is prohibited within a mile of shore . . .

Grilse and kings are running heavy and excellent water conditions prevail in the three great Down East salmon rivers, the Restigouche, Miramichi and Margaree.

ROSLINDALE, ST. THOMAS NINES TILT

St. Thomas and Roslindale, who finished the first half of the battle in the City League tied with 19 wins and 5 losses each, will start their miniature world series for the first half championship tonight at Carolina ave., Jamaica Plain.

This first clash of a three game series, the second coming Friday night and the third if necessary at Braves Field at a later date, will start at 6:15.

The Saints have something of an advantage playing on their home grounds. Normie Sims, ex-Holy Cross captain, will twirl against Roslindale. Sims, when he's good, can't be touched. Jim Shea or Bill Barrett will hurl for Roslindale.

Sims will have some fine support from Jerry Shanahan and Hank Garrity, who played at the Cross with him, Joe Zapustus from Fordham and Frank Regan from B. C.

Barrett, formerly with the Red Sox, Hank Barber, leading intercollegiate batter from Dartmouth, and Les Shatzer, who leads the City loop in homers with 19 wallops out of bounds, are big noises in the Roslindale attack.

LABOR DEPT. ON 5-DAY WEEK

Washington, July 25 (AP)—The Labor Department today began operating on a five-day week basis.

For the next 48 weeks the department will be closed all day Saturday and Sunday, to carry out the provisions of the recently-enacted economy bill.

In the announcement, Sec. Doak said that by eliminating the Saturday half-holiday the requirement of furloughing each employe for 24 work days would be carried out.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, expressed pleasure at the department's action.

"I'm glad to know that the department of labor has established the five-day week," he said. "It is the logical place and I hope the example will be followed by other departments."

Doomed Slayer Gets His Ninth Reprieve

Albany, N. Y., July 25 (AP)—Benjamin (Cockeye Benny) Gordon, awaiting execution in the death house in Sing Sing prison, today was granted his ninth reprieve by Gov. Roosevelt. The respite was given to allow Gordon to testify in the murder trial of Jack Zaroff. The respite extends Gordon's life until Nov. 3.

Gordon was sentenced to death for the killing of Anthony Grisolia in the holdup of a Bronx garage on July 28, 1929.

2 GET CITY AID AS SON TOURS

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

(This is the 12th in the series of stories on charity swindlers of Boston.)

For six months welfare authorities had sought this man and last Saturday he appeared.

During all this time, the department had been aiding his parents while he was driving around in an automobile. And when he was questioned about his neglect of his mother and father, he became surly and sarcastic.

Under his breath he was profane to Special Officer Ernest F. Fanjoy, while his mother stood by and said nothing.

"You have money enough to pay for your registration but you won't give any to your folks?" Officer Fanjoy asked him.

He said he didn't pay for it, but that a friend helped him out. And then finally he answered:

"Well, what of it if I did pay for it?"

He added:

"That's what this department is here for, to give help, isn't it?"

When he wouldn't "come clean" with Officer Fanjoy about the automobile and its upkeep, his case was referred to the Board of Overseers of the Poor.

REQUIRED TO WORK

"We have been looking for you for six months and you've been chasing all over the country in an automobile. You know you can't do that and get aid," Officer Fanjoy told him.

When told that aid had been stopped pending the decision of the board, he left, hurling profane invective at Officer Fanjoy, the department and all connected with the headquarters.

He was a young man and the city expected that he work for the city if the city was to continue aiding his family. But search for him seemed futile. He was always one step ahead of the investigators, Fanjoy explained. The department continued to aid the parents until last week, when word reached headquarters that he was living at home again on the city's money.

Welfare authorities are now checking up on an East Boston family about whom they were "tipped" in a letter.

AIDED WITH 2 INCOMES

The letter informed officials that this family was receiving $14 a week from the welfare department while also receiving $13 weekly earnings of a son. And in addition to that, $9 a week was being provided by an insurance company. The informant told also of a cash award made to the family for injuries sustained by the wife in an accident.

Secretary Walter V. McCarthy, as well as Asst. Corp. Counsel Hale Power and Special Officer Fanjoy are receiving daily a flood of tips from citizens intent on assisting authorities in weeding out the growing number of "chiselers" defrauding the city.

The police check-up under Commissioner Eugene Hultman's supervision will begin as soon as the list supplied by the welfare department has been subdivided into police divisions, wards and precincts.

With the combined forces of the police and staff visitors of the welfare department at work, "sweet charity" will no longer be a racket.

Secretary McCarthy announced that the list of 130 persons arrested by Boston police and found to be welfare recipients is being especially looked into. This list originally in the possession of Commissioner Hultman involves crooks, paroled men from penal institutions and bootleggers. And when convictions have been recorded against them, their names will be made public as welfare frauds.

THIS IS LIFE

THEATER ENRICHED BY RARE GENIUS OF ZIEGFELD IN CREATING BEAUTY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

SEVERAL YEARS AGO I was sitting in the balcony of the Colonial Theater, over at one side. It was the first night of "Rio Rita" and the sides of the balcony were, for some reason, not full.

PROF. ROGERS

It was a hot night, or the theater was hot, and the show seemed interminable. It was, indeed, so full of richness that it seemed unending. Behind me, I noticed out of the corner of my eye a solitary gentleman who seemed bored with the entertainment. He sat quietly, most undemonstrative, and watched that really gorgeous entertainment as if he didn't care whether he were there or no.

As he went out between the acts I saw him more clearly. Gray business suit, blue collar and tie, smooth gray hair worn a bit pompadourish. And suddenly it came to me that it was Flo Ziegfeld. When the final curtain fell he was no longer in his seat. He was back of the stage, beginning to whittle down that mammoth production into the success it later became. I suppose that in every show he put on he discarded enough to make a show for an ordinary producer.

Ziegfeld Creation of Beauty

There will be innumerable stories told about him now that he is dead so untimely, but out of all the stories this fact will emerge; the man was as great and as matchless in the show business as was David Belasco. He pioneered; others imitated; and always he held his own pace and refused to be stampeded into what seemed the current fashion.

In a day when the American musical show was stereotyped and conventional, the "musical comedy" of pleasant but insipid memory, he brought over from Paris the "revue" and re-created it for America in the image of his own taste. And for over 25 years he stuck to his own conception of what that sort of show should be.

Other men took his model and made it over and degraded it. They introduced the smutty blackout; they experimented with nudity, obliquely at first and then more blatantly, until that form of show became merely a wholesale flesh market. And the more his competitors undressed their girls, the more Ziegfeld dressed his, in the most elaborate of fashions and the most sumptuous and authentic of fabrics, until they looked the way high society ought to look—and doesn't.

The man was mad on beauty. He introduced—it is not too much to say—he invented and created beauty for the American stage. I am speaking not merely of his taste in girls, although it is true that the Ziegfeld girl came to be the unquestioned criterion by which all others were measured. But the Ziegfeld girls were costumed as no chorus girls were ever costumed before. And they were posed against the loveliest of scenery, lighted with love and skill. The American theater owes a great deal to Joseph Urban, but it owes Joseph Urban himself to Ziegfeld.

I can't remember whether it was the Follies of 1907 or of 1908 that I first saw. But the show itself is not to be forgotten. Eva Tanguay of the raucous voice and the superb legs, dancing in a leopard skin to a rowdy tune about Teddy Roosevelt and the animals in Africa—

"Run, you lions and you tigers, run,

Quality in Humor, Not Quantity

People used to say that Ziegfeld had no sense of comedy and that his shows were weak in that respect. It is probably true that he thought primarily in terms of line and form and color. But one needs only to run over in memory the roster of his shows to prove that what he had of humor was nearly always memorable and lasting. He pinned his faith on a little that was good rather than on a good deal of the second-rate.

The figures he sponsored nearly always proved his judgment sound by becoming the classics of our amusement business. Will Rogers, for instance, a rope-throwing, gum-chewing monologuist, now the accepted representative of the Plain People in his dry, irreverent comments on world figures and world affairs. Fannie Brice, one of our few genuine serio-comics, ranging from the pathos of "My Man" to the broad comedy of "Mrs. Feitelbaum at the Beach." W. C. Fields, juggler extraordinary, whom Ziegfeld allowed to develop into a first class comedian. Eddie Cantor, who shares with Ed Wynn the proud post of First Comic to the American people. One could go on——

Ziegfeld's first and last love was the "revue," that form of entertainment which he created on this side of the Atlantic. When he turned his attention to the musical show he put other producers in the shade by lavishing on it the same abundance of material, the same attention to the luxury and gorgeousness, the same passion for pictorial beauty he gave to his earlier pieces.

The Florida settings of "Kid Boots," the Mexican atmosphere of "Rio Rita," with that ringing chorus of the Texas Rangers, and that gorgeous re-creation of the Paris of Louis XIII in "The Three Musketeers" were all memorable. Perhaps the loveliest thing he ever did, it seems to me, was the finale of "Whoopee," the Arizona cliff dwelling and the procession of superb horses, each ding an Indian girl with massive feather head-dress, the kind ect that Ziegfeld loved.

TUNNEL BORING FINISHED WITH 200 PRESENT

Mayor Points Lesson on Employment and Work Without Loss of Life

Boring of the traffic tunnel under the harbor, linking Boston and East Boston, was finished today with appropriate ceremonies in which Mayor Curley was the leading speaker.

"The city is spending $18,000,000 on this project," said the mayor. "Boston's population is about 1-150th of that of the entire country.

"If the Government at Washington spent a proportionate amount on public works it would be spending approximately $3,000,000,000, and as a result the present economic situation would not be such a grim and foreboding reality."

He pointed out also that the tunnel, which will be open for auto traffic in less than a year and a half, will make Boston Airport the most accessible in the country.

About 200 persons accompanied Mayor Curley and Col. Thomas F. Sullivan, chairman of the transit commission, down the concrete tube from North st., Boston, to the spot under the harbor's edge where the shield turned for the last time, completing the bore.

Among them was Rev. James J. Corbett, one of two descendants of George Washington now living in Boston. Another was Col. Sullivan's daughter, Mary. Not a life was lost on the boring and this was commented upon by both Col. Sullivan, overseer of the task, and the mayor.

FLYING OVER TEN STATES IN ONE DAY

A. H. MAPLE — MISS WASHINGTON — MAJ. DOOLITTLE

Miss Anne Madison Washington, great-great-granddniece of George Washington, left Boston airport early today in plane with Maj. James H. Doolittle on tour promoted by A. H. Maple of New York, extending 2000 miles over ten states and all important points visited by the "Father of His Country." The plane went first to Maine, returned to Massachusetts and sped toward Rhode Island, Connecticut and Pennsylvania, thence on to Washington. The all-day flight is to end in New York tonight. CROONER FINDS PUNISHMENT FOR THROWERS

Radio Star, Studying for Bar, Learns They Could Be Tried for Murder Attempt

A vulgar person who hurled grapefruit at a crooner may be guilty of attempted murder, said Rudy Vallee today.

Me for whom life has become just a bowl of law books has made this discovery while in pursuit of his studies in preparation for bar examinations and, as history sometimes repeats itself, it may some day come in handy, said he.

"For instance, Your Honor—er, I mean to say, for instance," said Vallee, "suppose some one sets a trap or snare for someone else which, if it succeeds, might kill the victim and the grapefruit hits the victim's saxaphone and drives it into his skull and kills him, then gentlemen of the jury—er, I mean, then the person throwing the grapefruit would be guilty of murder. At least it would be criminal negligence."

"At least," agreed his listeners, who included newspapermen and Dean Gleason L. Archer of Suffolk law school, who is tutoring the crooner in the ways and wherefores of statutes.

FOR CORRECT ENGLISH

Vallee was paying a visit to Dean Archer at the school and as an himself pointed out, he was physically able to do so because the new famous grapefruit, delivered by Harvard students from the balcony of a Boston theater, failed to hit the alto saxophone upon which, at the moment, the famous crooner and tooler was tooting, "Oh, Give Me Something to Remember You By."

"And, by the way," said Vallee, "this song should have been "Oh, Give Me Something by Which to Remember You.' I always have been a stickler for technicalities. I'm always correcting people. I detest double negatives. That's why I think I'll be a good lawyer."

The new law student's zeal and intelligence and his unusual power of concentration mean a brilliant future for him in the profession of law, said the dean.

WOULD BE RADIO CZAR.

"Why," he continued, "even in the back stage of the theater when the feature picture is talking in booming tones and the place is swarming with chorus girls limbering up for their dance, he never misses a word of my explanations of law."

Vallee, or Rudy as he is popularly known, revealed his ambition to be a czar of the radio, even as Will Hays is czar of the movies, and that is one reason why he has begun to study law and, four or five years fro mdate, plans to take our examinations.

"I'd also like to go into politics some day," he said. "All the big executives and politicians have law degrees," he pointed out.

"Music is my first love and always will be, but I want to look ahead to the days when I'm not going to be so popular or something might go wrong.

In a typewritten statement, he said:

FOR PRACTICAL PROBLEMS

"I have learned from experience that a college training however valuable culturally, does not equip a man to meet practical problems of life. The college graduate is still a babe in the woods of legal technicalities through which every man who is called upon to make agreements and sign contracts must travel."

Dean Archer, in another prepared statement, added:

"I am thoroughly enjoying my association with him. I have observed him in his New York home, in his dressing room in the backstage and on the street. He is always the same unassuming chap, unspoiled by his great popularity. He and his charming young wife are, in my opinion, one of the most interesting young couples in America today."

SCARLET FEVER RUNAWAY BACK

James J. Evers, Jr., 4, whose sudden disappearance from City Hospital, where he was recovering from scaret fever, created an uproar until he was found in Brookline, is back in the hospital today with authorities keeping close watch on him.

The boy, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Evers, of Mystic st., Charlestown, left the hospital shortly before the noonday meal yesterday and a few hours later was found in Brookline, almost six miles away.

Discovery that he was missing caused an uproar at the hospital and a frantic search was made throughout the building and grounds. Police were notified and the boy's description was flashed over the teletype.

A few hours later Patrolman Francis Burke, Brookline, recognized the boy as he was driving near Longwood Towers and picked him up.

THIEVES STEAL CHOICE GOWNS

With a very discriminating taste, thieves selected only the best and most expensive gowns and frocks for their loot in a week-end robbery in the Vanity Frock Shop, Commonwealth and Harvard aves., Allston, it was reported today to police.

The robbery was discovered by Miss Freda Casler, daughter of the proprietor, when she opened the shop for business. The thieves made a careful selection of about $1500 worth of stock. Cheaper dresses and gowns were thrown aside.

FILIPINOS QUIT FLORIDA FARMS

West Palm Beach, Fla., July 25 (AP)—All Filipinos residing in the Upper Everglades have agreed to evacuate by tonight because white neighbors protested their presence, F. M. George, prominent resident of Canal Point, told the Palm Beach Times today.

A crowd of 150 white men called on the Filipino farmers Friday night and ordered them to quit the fertile trucking belt by tonight. An incident involving a Filipino and a white girl and reports that 3000 more were coming from California to jon their countrymen were said to have motivated the edict.

Chief of Police F. B. Harrison of Pahokee reported all but 11 in the colony of 50 left the community Saturday night, bound for Cuba. Of those remaining, six were given permission by the white men to stay until forthcoming crops were harvested.

SEIZED CHOKING HIS WIFE

Edmund Pigo, 48, of Wright st., Wellesley, was arraigned in Dedham court today on charges of breaking into the house of a neighbor and assault and battery on Pigo's wife, Eleanor, from whom he has been separated two months.

Patrolman Chisholm and Sergt. Fisher of Wellesley claimed Pigo forced his way into the home of Walter Babboni, Linden st., Wellesley, at 4 a. m. today and started to choke his wife.

Judge Sanborn found probable cause to hold Pigo in $5000 for the grand jury on a charge of breaking into a dwelling "with intent to murder" and assault and battery on his wife.

BOY STRUCK BY MERCY AUTO

Struck by an auto carrying an ill woman to St. Margaret's Hospital, Frank Adams, 13, of Eastman st., Dorchester, is in a critical condition at City Hospital today.

According to police, Adams was crossing Columbia rd. at Holden ave., Roxbury, eating an ice cream cone, when the car hit him.

Police say the driver gave a slip of paper to Harold Kobylesky, 16, of Intervale st., Roxbury, on which was the name, "McGaffigan," saying he had an ill woman in the car and could not stop. The car is registered under the name of Andrew McGaffigan of 39 Lonsdale st., Dorchester.

JUDGE WAITS FOR CUSTOMERS

Court busines is so quiet in East Boston these days that Judge Barnes has to sit in his lobby and wait for customers to arrive. He disposed of five cases in 10 minutes today, sending one man to the House of Correction for 10 days and taking from another a $25 fine. The cases of three others, arraigned for drunkenness, were filed.

And then the name of Carmen Alberti of New York was called for keeping up and exposing liquor. He didn't answer so there was nothing else to do but wait. After an hour the judge issued a default warrant for his arrest.

Peter Gorgopulos, 43, of Bennington st., arrived an hour too early and went for a walk. But he prolonged the walk and when his name was called a police car was sent to his home to get him.

He told the court he had returned at 10:30 but saw no one on the bench, thought court was over and went home. His case was continued a week.

Suicide Attempt Follows Quarrel

Janitor's $15,000 Will Send Grandchildren to School

The $15,000 fortune, scrimped and saved from his earnings of the janitor-father she has not seen for 17 years, will send her two children to college and pay off the mortgage on her Brunswick, Me. home, Mrs. Pauline Sanborn, 32, said today.

She was taken from her home in Wakefield, 17 years ago when her mother divorced George R. Edwards, the daughter explained today in an interview at the Colonial Inn, Wakefield.

"I am surprised that my father had so much money," she continued, "but he was always a frugal man and carefully guarded his pennies. If I get the money, my children will receive a good education and go to college. Then, too, I would like to buy my home in Brunswick."

Mrs. Sanborn came to Wakefield when authorities notified her of her father's death and the bank accounts of more than $15,000 which they found in his rooms.

Edwards, who lived as a recluse, was believed to be poor, until authorities, searching for names of relatives, stumbled on the small fortune.

Mrs. Sanborn said she was the wife of a small contractor, John P. Sanborn, and would return to Brunswick as soon as the legal status of her claim had been established.

John Tells Sondra He Is Going Away

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

"Marry me before I go," Mark Merriman says to Sondra Kent as he prepares to go away for years of work in the Congo. Sondra is more ready to agree than she ever has been before. She has determined not to marry Mark, because of his poverty, since she has been trained to make a wealthy marriage. She even has asked John Anderson to give Mark the position, but now she dreads the separation. The nearness of Mark's departure leads them to tell each other of their mutual love, and she finally marries Mark. After the ship sails, John takes her to lunch, where they meet the woman she claims to have stayed with the night she was married, and Lynn is forced to lie to John.

NOW READ ON

SONDRA shrugged her shoulders. "It's no answer to our question to ask another," she said.

She fancied that Anderson winced, and she said quickly, "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to be disagreeable" — and after a moment, "Thank you for your letter, John."

"The honor is mine," he answered gravely.

He talked very little to her during dinner—devoting himself to the woman on his other side, and Sondra felt piqued.

Later in the evening when he asked if she would care to go to the races with him the following day she said coldly:

"Isn't there someone else you would rather take?"

He checked a smile.

"If there was, should I ask you?"

"You might—if you thought I expected you to."

"Isn't that rather an insult — to yourself?"

She flushed a little.

"You seemed rather engrossed with Mrs. Layton at dinner time I thought," she said resentfully.

"I was trying to spare you the necessity of talking to me — after what you said."

Sondra sighed. "Life's such a muddle," she said, unconsciously echoing the words Flora had spoken earlier in the evening.

"That needs explaining," Anderson told her lightly.

"Does it?"

She looked at him rather wistfully, then suddenly she said:

WHAT PEOPLE THINK

"John, has it ever occurred to you—what people think of us?"

"Of you and I?"

"Yes."

"I never trouble my head what people think."

She was silent for a moment, then she said:

"Well?"

"I didn't like it."

"The remedy is in your own hands."

"What do you mean?"

"Only that you should not leave money lying on your dressing-table; it might be stolen."

"You're splitting straws," she said rather impatiently. "Flora knows quite well that I can't dress as I do—on what she gives me."

"She must have known that for some time."

"Yes—but . . . it was only to-night—that I realized it."

"Why tonight?"

"I don't know; at least—" she broke off. She knew well enough—it was Mark who had made her realize it; Mark's love for her and his trust.

They were both silent for a moment, then Anderson said with an effort:

JOHN EXPLAINS

"And the outcome of all this is that you will not come to the races with me tomorrow."

"Do you want me to come?"

He laughed a little.

"I am not an eloquent man. If I went on my knees to you, it would be done such a clumsy and unconvincing way that—"

"You're making fun of me," she protested. "It's not kind, John—you hurt me."

"My dear—" he said. "Are you

MAY BE THOSE OF FOUL PLAY VICTIM

Police Believe Find May Solve Disappearance of Contractor Eight Years Ago

Bones which may be those of a man or woman victim of foul play were dug today from a suspected grave found in a wooded lot in the Waveland section of Hull.

Police digging under the supervision of Public Safety Commissioner Stevens, after Capt. Beaupre of the State police had viewed the scene, unearthed several bones before water flooded into the excavation at a depth of four feet.

These bones were to be examined by Medical Examiner Sweeney.

Charles Gould, of E st., Hull, picking raspberries in the lot, which is between E and F sts., yesterday came upon a depression seven feet long and three feet wide, resembling a sunken grave. The depression was a foot in depth and Gould recalled that last year the ground at that particular spot appeared to have sunk a few inches. He notified the authorities.

Police believe the find may prove to be the solution of the mysterious disappearance of Carmine Uva, prosperous Hull contractor, who vanished in 1924 while living in Waveland. His auto and bank deposits were intact and inquiry among relatives in Italy failed to produce any clue to his whereabouts. Foul play was suspected.

TOURISTS LIMITED AT DINNER TO GRAVY SOUP

By GILBERT SELDES

THAT THE SWEDES are a nation of epicures is apparently known to all men, with two exceptions: Messrs. C. A. Thimm and Carl Cederlof, and, by a coincidence, these two have prepared the manual from which I am preparing to order the incredible dishes other travelers have told me not to miss. As in all manuals of conversation, in all languages, breakfast comes off rather well, with a choice of tea, coffee or chocolate, although, following the universal custom, "this cream is sour" (den har gradden ar sur). But lunch and dinner are meagre festivals.

GILBERT SELDES

Even the technique is faulty. After demanding the bill of fare, the bright lexicon of Swedish advises you ask "What have you ready?" a betrayal of all the finer instincts of the gourmet, who knows that the only food worth eating is the food which is not prepared in advance. To this query the waiter, I gather, counters with "Hvad for soppa vill hi ha?" which may be translated "What will you have for soup?" and the solitary reply, in a country of Great Cooks, is that ancient favorite of all vocabularies, "Gravy soup."

It is my firm belief that no such compound as gravy soup ever existed, but it is "uncaldo de sustancias" in my little Spanish book, it is "kottsoppa" in Swedish, I remember being baffled by it in an abortive effort to learn Russian, and weary, wayworn wanderers have heard of it, but never seen it, in Italy and Bohemia. Obviously a lexicographer's invention, it maintains its place in the books as the result of a conspiracy; the type was set up generations ago, and it would cost too much to change it now. Perhaps, in the end, writers of manuals will wear down the cooks, and, having invented the name, will compel them to invent the thing. I hope not.

Little to Eat.

The Swedish meal is soon finished, according to the book. You ask for roast beef, get fried soles, and that is all the nourishment you can have, unless you count cayenne pepper, far down the list, as food. The book also offers "spenat och sparriskal" and pretends that they are spinach and broccoli; but if sparriskal is not asparagus, what is language for, and whoever served both spinach and broccoli at one time? There is a wine list and there is a big surprise, which goes right back to the beginning. For, after you have chosen the wine, and presumably eaten the sole, the question appears, "Will you take some soup?" As no marks of identification are visible, you assume it is the same gravy soup, and your answer, naturally, is "nej, tack," or the hell with it.

It is clear that I will have to order the regular dinner in Stockholm and Upsala and trust that the Swedish cuisine is superior to the Swedish vocabulary. The linguistic preparation for visitors is never adequate except on the negative side, and so long as you have a full line of complaints at the tip of your tongue you must not expect the joys of the palate.

Our own welcome to foreigners is as meagre as theirs to us. Most of the little books are prepared by Englishmen, and I have not yet discovered a vade mecum with which a Turk, or French, or Proo*h*ian could safely go into a speakeasy. The guide offered to the French presents the shortest and skimpiest meal on record, although it begins nobly with the "brinng me (th)e ouain list." The blow falls soon enough for the Frenchman asks for a littl' aice, apparently to commit the solecism of putting it into his wine. Thereafter he has a dozen oysters (oister'c), some iced water, a pot of tea with cold (hot) milk, a footstool, and the bill which is, however, not correct. That is the meal he may order in conversation, but if he rudely wishes merely to cry out the names of comestibles his range is virtually unlimited. He can have a plete of entchovis or bit'route, various beefs, duck, a decanter, cauliflower, lemon, a chop to be cut with a naife, and pannkeks with crime.

Public Notices.

Our lexicons for tourists in America lack, however, one rubric which the Swedes have provided: Notices. Here you find all those signs which are so baffling as you pass through the streets of a foreign city: No Thoroughfare and Just Published, Pull and Push, Bed-room for Single Gentlemen and the like. It is gratifying to learn that even in civilized Stockholm you will find Var snall och torka af fotterna and will obediently wipe your feet.

AGNES STEVENS DEATH PROBED

The body of auburn-haired Agnes Stevens, Melrose student, found shot in her car at Red Wing, Minn., last Friday, is expected to reach here today.

Funeral arrangements will be completed by her father, Charles W. Stevens, Boston bank official, who is profoundly shocked by the death of his pretty daughter, reported a suicide as a result of overwork in her studies and illness suffered last year.

Despite the suicide report Minnesota officials are still probing the case because of an anonymous letter received Saturday and because of other mysterious angles of the case. Postal officials have joined with Minnesota officers in attempting to trace the note which derided the suicide theory.

SKYSCRAPER

Novel from Which M-G-M Made the Cosmopolitan Film 'Skyscraper Souls'

By Faith Baldwin

MANY THINGS were not yet clear to her, but a nebulous theory was forming in her mind. That night she went to Lynn's apartment and found her consuming bread and milk and cocoa before rushing off to a class.

"Sit down," invited Lynn. "I'm almost through."

"No. Lynn, please tell me the truth this time. Did Tom know about this merger proposition a long time ago and did he speak to you about it? Did you disapprove of his attitude?"

"And you think now—?"

"Sarah, what am I to think?" She flung her hands out. "The rumor; the stock buying; Tom's new job; his new car. He has broken his word."

"Are you sure?"

"He hasn't been near me since I accused him of it." Her lips shook.

Sarah went back upstairs. Lynn had spoken to David Dwight of this last summer. Dwight knew. It was possible Dwight might be in a position to know more, to know definitely that Tom Shepard had broken his word.

But what was more important to Sarah was that Dwight had told her that he was absolved from his.

Downstairs, Lynn was putting on her hat and coat. How Sarah had come by her information she did not know. Possibly Mr. Norton had been talking to her. The telephone rang. Tom? She ran to the instrument.

"Lynn? This is David Dwight."

She said, after a moment, "How on earth did you get my number? It isn't in the book."

"I saw Sarah today," he answered.

GIVEN TELEPHONE NUMBER

That was odd. Sarah had not spoken of him, yet she had given Dwight her telephone number. Lynn dismissed it from her mind. As a matter of fact, the telephone number, neatly typed, had been in plain view on a card of numbers lying on Sarah's desk. Dwight remembered numbers.

He said, now, "I've missed you. Will you have dinner with me tomorrow night?"

There is a curious little road house not very far from Yonkers. It has an "authentic," romantic setting, and is perched on a cliff overlooking a deep ravine from which the spruce trees aspire, very tall, with dark, straight trunks. The inn itself is bright, evenings, with Japanese lanterns, and is run by two gentlemen from the Orient. But if you wish it, good American and better French food is served there, and of recent years, the Cherry Blossom has found it expedient to engage one of the best colored orchestra in Manhattan.

For a long time not so very many people knew about the Cherry Blossom. Lately, however, the enterprising U. B. C., always hunting for excellent sustaining programs, placed a semi-permanent installation in the road house and on divers nights brought the turgid or violent music made by the possible descendants of African kings into the homes of what is optimistically termed "millions of listeners."

Into this inn the long arm of remote control reached out and touched Lynn, figuratively speaking, on the shoulder.

DWIGHT VERY AMIABLE

Dwight had taken her there the evening of their reunion. He had been very amiable that evening, and Lynn had accused him of vast arrears of attention.

"It wasn't altogether my fault; and not my inclination. Sarah"—he raised a whimsical eyebrow—"Sarah, poor dear, warned me that I was rushing in where Shepards feared to tread. Nice Christmas metaphor, that."

Lynn said unsmilingly, "She needn't have bothered. That's over, you know."

"No, I didn't know. I'm sorry. No, that's a lie. I'm not sorry. But if you're unhappy, Lynn, then I must be sorry."

"It's hard. I—please don't talk about it," she said, vainly trying to control her lips. "Let's dance, shall we?"

Later, driving her home, he said, "Christmas won't be so very merry this year, will it? Suppose we celebrate together. I'm lonely, too."

"You, lonely!"

"Why not? Acquaintances, friends, even, can't make up for—other things."

She thought he spoke of his broken home, his children; she touched his hand and said, "I do understand." She didn't of course.

After a moment he drew his hand gently away. He had to, or crash to the ground the delicate structure of confidence he was assisting her to build.

"You're a darling," he said lightly. But he had not thought of his flat-footed, flat-chested wife or of his ungainly youngsters. At Christmas time he dismissed the latter from his mind by opening his check book.

CHRISTMAS DINNER

"I have to have Christmas dinner with Sarah in the middle of the day," she told him.

"Then give me the evening. We'll be very foolish. We'll do all sorts of absurd things. Is it a bargain?"

It was a bargain. She made her excuses to Sarah, not very well. Sarah commented only

"I hoped you'd stay with us."

"I promised—someone," Lynn told her.

Afterward she wondered why she had not told her all the truth. But at the moment she could not. Sarah wouldn't approve; Sarah, moreover, had been intefering; just as Jennie had said she would.

Jennie sent perfume for Christmas, a great box of it, tied with red ribbon. "Good luck," read the card, "and happy days. Come see me on Christmas if you can."

That meant that the mysterious Jake was at home with his people. Lynn took a bus early Christmas morning and went to Jennie's. Jennie, in a negligee, opened the door to her friend.

SHE DISPLAYED JAKE'S GIFTS

"Gave my smoke the day off," she explained.

Jennie had trimmed a Christmas tree. She displayed Jake's gifts—an ermine wrap, stockings by the dozen, a wrist watch, candy, flowers, fruit.

"He's a good egg," she admitted, yawning.

The apartment was just as you'd think it might be; long-legged dolls and frilly cushions; lots of furniture; the best radio money may buy. Jennie, in lace and chiffon, trailed about the place, dissatisfied.

"Has Tom said anything about Slim?" she asked.

"Not very much," Lynn answered carefully. "I—I haven't been seeing much of Tom lately."

Jennie nodded. "So I gathered from what Slim said." She point to a little package clumsily tied in red paper. "There's what he sent me," she told Lynn. A pair of gloves—wrong size; some handkerchiefs; a funny little pin fashioned in the shape of a perky Scottie, and a Christmas card. "Sorter sweet," said Jennie, low. But in a moment, as Lynn laid the things back in their box, "Drink?" asked Jennie, moving toward the cellaret.

"Heavens, no! At this hour of the morning? Jennie, you're not going to—?"

THE BLUE EYES WERE TIRED

"Believe it or not, I am! Look here, Lynn, I'm bored to blazes. I even look forward to going to work," Jennie admitted.

The long blue eyes were tired. The wheaten hair had lost some of its luster. She was thinner than ever, a little haggard.

"You and Tom been fighting again?" she inquired.

Lynn stiffened. "No. It's over and done with, that's all."

"Darned shame," Jennie stared at her, at the angry, hurt gray eyes. "Well, it's not my business," she conceded. "Sometimes I think it's a mistake for two saps to love each other a lot. What do you get out of it? Precious little pleasure for the rest of the trouble you have to wade through." Her eyes were moody.

Lynn asked quickly, trying to divert her from the subject of Tom and herself,

"Is it Slim, Jennie?"

"Yeah. Darn him, anyway," Jennie said, without anger, "with his long legs and his eyes like a hungry kid's and his coat sleeves that are always a couple of inches too short. I could laugh him off before, when I was on my own, free. That's funny, isn't it? But now, hanging around this dump, alone nights—lonely, it's different. I've got to watch my step," she added somberly.

Lynn left her presently. Standing at the door, Jennie said:

"Wish you wouldn't go. I'll stick around here, go out to dinner, come home and wait for a long-distance call—not that it matters. Lynn, what do you do with yourself now that Tom—"

Lynn said,

"I have my work up at Columbia. I see Sarah a lot. Lately, David Dwight has been taking me out. We've been to a funny little place out of town, the Cherry Blossom."

"Yeah, I know it. I saw you there once."

THEY HAD PRIVATE ROOM

"You did?" Lynn stared. "Why didn't you come over and speak to us?"

"Fat chance! Lynn, you are a kid! I was with—oh, a gang. We had a private room. Do you think I wanted to let you know I was there so you could help carry me out?"

"Jennie!"

"Run along and eat your turkey," said Jennie, and gave her a gentle push, "and don't fret about me. I'm oke—everything is Jake. That's pretty good, isn't it? That hands me a laugh!"

She was still laughing, lonely, forlorn laughter, as Lynn closed the door.

Christmas with Sarah was a falsely merry affair; a small tree and presents, and a heavy dinner; n much conversation. There was an empty place at the table. Lynn saw it; Sarah saw it.

Afterwards she was glad to escape. Dwight sent the car for her and it took her directly to the penthouse. She went upstairs, wondering, a little, not at the unconventionality of her visit, but at what he had in store for her. She had been like a child always, greedy for a surprise, for a secret, and she was wondering if she could recapture that. She thought not.

Christmas Day. Tom had not even phoned. But flowers had come, without a card. Could it be possible—

Where was he?

He was in Childs' with Hank, gnawing upon a turkey bone. Later he would be back at the studio, working savagely to insure the success of a new sponsored program.

Dwight asked: "Did my flowers come?"

Lynn thanked him, sick with disappointment. She might have known.

"Are you warmly dressed?"

"You told me to be."

"Go upstairs," he said, "and look in the bedroom. But not now. Look at your stocking first."

It was of wool; it dangled from the fireplace. She took it down and opened it under his amused and eager eyes. Perfume; lipstick—a eager eyes. Perfume; lipstick—a bangles; soap; handkerchiefs.

"How—dear!" she said sincerely. But her eyes were absent. Why hadn't he sent his card with the flowers? She'd rather have known at once than hoped—and prayed.

"We're going riding," he said, "where there's snow. On the Island. Go upstairs and see what Santa brought you."

She ran up the stairs under the friendly eyes of the man Wilkins. In the bedroom she found a suitcase, fitted, stamped with her initials; and in the suitcase a winter sports outfit, stockings, sweater, scarf, beret, chamois coat, amusing trousers, gloves.

"Oh!" her voice floated down to him.

Wilkins put his head around the door. "Carry it for you, miss?"

She went downstairs, laughing. "Commander Byrd," she hailed him, and smiled. "Shall I put them on now?"

"It's not antarctic but it's something of an expedition," he warned her. "No, wait till we get there."

Presently, the suitcase and one of his were put in the car. They drove out of town swiftly through the twilight. It was a white Christmas. Lighted trees shone from the windows of apartments and houses and from churchyards.

"It's beautiful," said Lynn, listening to the chimes.

They had left the town behind them. There was little traffic and Dwight drove fast. Beyond Great Neck he turned into a long, snow-rutted lane.

Trees laden with snow, frosty, gleaming, bordered it on either side. A turn, and there was a house waiting, a house from an old fashioned Christmas card. Every window was lighted; they wore wreaths of holly; there were two lighted trees outside. As Lynn got out of the car she heard voices, laughter.

"But where—who—"

"Friends of mine. You'll like them. Lulu and Mike Hayward."

She did like them. Their hostess, a fat woman, had the skin of a child, the wide blue eyes of a child. The host, her husband, was lean, bronzed. There were other people, all in sports clothes. The Carters.

Yule log, puch, a bedroom to change in, the toboggan on the hill, the first wild essay with skis, Lynn's feet helplessly slipping from under her, Dwight, laughing, picking her out of a snow bank. And at midnight, supper, dancing.

At nearly three o'clock in the morning they turned out of the Hayward's drive and spun through the quiet of the waning night. It was light when he left her at her own door.

"Tired?"

"No."

"Awfully."

She smiled up at him. He took the sprig of mistletoe from his buttonhole and held it over her head; he kissed her under the startled eyes of a lone and cold policeman. Not with the light kiss—that other kiss. She drew back afraid. Not repulsed, but afraid. Not afraid of him but of her loneliness, of her youth, her warm blood, her awakened senses.

"My Christmas present," he said, and drove away.

Trembling, she went into the house. She thought, I ought not to see him again. Jennie was right about its being dangerous. But why? she argued. I like him a lot. I admire him but I don't really care for him. It's Tom, always Tom, only—sure you are not hurting yourself—and quite unnecessarily?"

She felt the tears in her eyes, and she bit her lip angrily.

"I don't know what you mean."

"I don't mean anything except that in spite of people like your sister, it is quite possible for a man to wish to give . . . friendship to a woman—without asking for anything in return. I hoped I had made you realize that long ago, Sondra."

She broke out impulsively. "You're much too good to me. I'm not worth anyone's affection . . . I'm so selfish . . . some day you'll be sorry."

"When I am, I'll tell you, and in the meantime, what about tomorrow? You'd better say yes, Sondra—because I'm going away at the end of the week."

"Going away?" She did not know if she was relieved or sorry. "Oh, where are you going?"

"No further than Europe, but I may be away for some time."

"I shall miss you."

"Will you? That's kind."

She was struck by the sadness of his eyes.

"Why are you going?" she asked.

"You don't really think that I meant I was tired to death of you?" she asked.

"If you did, that's not what is driving me away. I arranged to go yesterday."

PLEASANT SURPRISE

"You didn't tell me."

"I thought I would keep it for a pleasant surprise."

She flushed and her eyes looked mortified.

"Now you're being unkind again."

"Not intentionally, Sondra. Quite the reverse."

"I wish you would say what you really mean."

"Very well then. I mean that I believe you will be glad to know that I am out of New York for a time; to know that you will not meet me at every street corner and in every one's drawing-room. To feel that you will be sent in to dinner with someone else as I shall not be there—"

"And all this because of what I said this evening? I didn't mean it?"

MADE ARRANGEMENTS

"I have already told you that I made all my arrangements to go away, yesterday."

She sat very still, looking away from him into the crowded room.

There was a queer feeling in her heart which she could not explain. She wanted him to go, and yet she resented it because he knew that she wanted him to go; yesterday she would unhesitatingly have said that there was nothing in the world John Anderson would not do for her, but tonight she had the strange feeling that she had lost some of her power over him. If she asked him to stay—she spoke suddenly. "Don't go, John—I shall be lonely without you."

"I must go."

"Even if I ask you to stay?"

"Even if you ask me to stay."

She said with quick anger. "Perhaps I was not so wrong after all in what I said—that you are tired of me."

He answered quietly. "Perhaps our friendship is too precious to me to risk weariness either on your side or mine."

She stood up, laughing rather recklessly.

"Very well—but don't forget that sometimes it is a case of 'Out of sight, out of mind.'—"

HER VOICE BROKE

How could she have said that—with Mark going further from her with every passing moment. Her face fell into lines of bitter weariness, and Anderson answered—

"All my life have been willing to take risks. Nothing worth while is ever achieved without a certain amount of risk."

She looked at him with defiant eyes.

"Perhaps this will be the exception that proves the rule," she said.

Anderson smiled.

"I don't think so," he answered quietly.

It was raining hard.

Sondra stood at the window of Flora's drawing-room, drumming her fingers on the window down which the big drops fell in an endless stream.

The street was deserted save for a postman.

It was a month since Mark Merriman sailed, and already the first sense of bitter desolation and unhappiness had grown dim in Sondra's heart.

DRENCHED IN TEARS

She no longer woke up at night, her face drenched in tears, she no longer went listlessly through the days, feeling that life had ended, and she had stopped ticking off the date on the calendar with a red pencil.

With the growth of the long spring days, she had taken a fresh interest in clothes, and she was looking forward with pleased anticipation to spending the month of June in Massachusetts with Beatrice Taylor.

It seemed queer.

As she looked out at the pitiless rain and watched the postman making his way from door to door, there was a strange little feeling of shame in Sondra's heart that she had—if not forgotten Mark already—at least she had learnt to do without him.

Sometimes Sondra took out her wedding ring and looked at it, wondering if it really belonged to her—it semed such an eternity since that hurried ceremony—that brief honeymoon.

Mark had written from the only port the ship had touched—a long passionate letter which she knew almost by heart, and yet there again she had the unreal feeling that it was merely something beautiful and quite apart from herself—this love of which he wrote so eloquently.

Of course, if the door opened and he suddenly came in everything would be just as it was when they parted—she would recapture the old joy and happiness.

Sondra closed her eyes for a moment and tried to visualise his f[illegible] but somehow even that seemed to evade her.

She sighed and turned restlessly away.

Flora was out—when was she ever at home?—and for once in her life Sondra had an empty afternoon.

It was too wet to go out, and there was nowhere that she wanted to go.

John Anderson was still abroad; she had heard from him once or twice—from Paris, Vienna—Berlin—short, friendly letters which told her little or nothing, except that he was moving about and could give no fixed address except his bankers.

It was strange that she should miss him more than she missed Mark. It worried her, too, because it seemed all wrong that the man whom she loved and whose wife she was seemed to have faded into a far horizon, while the other, for whom she cared nothing, was always in her thoughts.

"It's because I'm so used [illegible] him," was the explanation [illegible] found. "There was always [illegible] to turn to—it's unkind of [illegible] have stayed away so [illegible]ore."

MANY PROMINENT PEOPLE HAVE BEEN ENDEAVORING to foster various worthy charities by throwing open their ancestral homes for the inspection of the public, for which small charges are made. The opportunities thus afforded to all have been quite unique this year, as some of the oldest and most historical estates in the country have been shown. Today and also tomorrow, from 3 to 6, the Dean of Washington Cathedral, The Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl and Mrs. Bratenahl are opening their summer estate at Gloucester, known as Braces Cove, for the benefit of the unemployment fund of All Hallows Guild.

The estate lies beyond Bass Rock, at Eastern Point, and will be found by following the shore along Atlantic ave. One approaches the house after passing through the gateway set in an old stone wall, and it may be recognized by its silhouette, a picturesque composition of irregular roof lines and tall chimneys with the sea, and sky beyond, also an old well-sweep, woodshed and ox-cart in the foreground.

The house was built some years ago, and is a copy of the early New England homes of 1680, both in its exterior, interior and in the planning of its gardens. Visitors who call to view the house will be asked to give a small admission charge at the door, all of which together with the proceeds of a sale of potted plants will go to assist the fund.

Plants From Historic Garden

ONE OF THE FEATURES OF THE SALE THAT HAS been arranged will be pots of boxwood and old English ivy, grown from cuttings taken from some of the historic plants in the beautiful Cathedral gardens. The ivy originates from cuttings sent over to Washington from Canterbury Cathedral many years ago while the boxwood is a descendant from a sprig taken out of Dolly Madison's bouquet, a century ago.

Alimony Club

HAVE YOU HEARD OF THE Alimony Club. Of course if you lived in or around New York you would have, as it is the latest and smartest of clubs. It started to function last May. The idea was mooted at a discussion that took place among the members of the Union and Metropolitan Clubs in New York, which dealt with the difficulties and hardships they experienced in paying up the alimony to their respective wives. It was a drain on their resources in every way, and because of the depression, it was more depressing than ever. So one member full of pep and ideas started the Alimony Club, for divorced men only, where they could live together at the least possible expense. Entertainers would give their services. We hear that the charge is only 75 cents a day for board. At any rate its membership is hard to obtain. The chef is one that has been with one of the members for years, in fact the new venture is said to be up to the moment in every detail.

Honolulu Folk Tour Cape

Mr Lothrop Withington is entertaining a house full of guests from Honolulu, and for their amusement took a trip down the Cape to Provincetown. They all took a swim in the Provincetown waters which were several degrees colder than the balmy waters of Waikiki, where the soft breezes wave the rustling fronds of the palm trees. Yes, in fact they found it quite a bit more chilly at Provincetown, but they also found the little town, as ever, full of intense interest with its funny narrow streets its quaint little shops that in spite of the depression look as gay and enterprising as ever, and are full of local color and atmosphere

One shop holds especial interest for tourists, the South African shop It is a quaint little shop with treasures and items of interest from Africa

The visitors from Honolulu met an interesting character, a beach comber who gathers during the summer months bits of shells, bones of strange shaped fish, and old cork bobbers that holds the nets of the Provincetown fishermen During the winter he fashions strange and marvelously shaped birds from his bits of collected material without using anything except what he finds drifted up on the beach.

Newport Is Still the Summer Capital; South Shore Notes

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THE COLONY HAS BEEN A little quiet this year. The brilliant wedding of Miss Adelaide Simms, daughter of Admiral and Mrs Sims, to Mr. Robert Fiske afforded a bright spot on the social horizon, but the beaches, the drives, and the atmosphere of dignity and social distinction of the gray old town are as lovely as ever. The people who are summering at Newport this season are the people who summer there every year, and as a rule whose parents and grandparents were there before them

ALL THAT NEWPORT EVER had to offer in the way of quaint old-fashioned charm, of cool opalescent beaches, and fragrant sunlit gardens, Newport still affords and its inhabitants are running true to traditions that surround them, that they are good sports, and while there are not the picturesque fetes under the low spreading horse chestnut trees and beeches of the lawns to give the place the atmosphere of gayety of other years, still the atmospheric depression is kept in abeyance by the valiant "carrying on" of the summer colony at Newport

The large and beautiful homes on the cliff are brightly lighted as the cool and quiet nights close down and the summer moon looks down upon a merry throng passing to and fro on Bellvue ave.

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

When a novelist—and particularly a novelist of Joseph Hergesheimer's distinction—goes traveling, he is bound to make discoveries which the ordinary tourist might see, but fail to drink in and record for us. He has the gift of entering a room and getting a story merely by glancing, say, at the eyes of a young girl.

Nothing is too small for his notice. Even waiters interest him. He does not view the human scene as an omnipotent judge, but as an avid spectator anxious to probe, to learn, and to listen. He can make of so commonplace an event as a haircut a prose poem.

His perceptions are so keen that the most trivial happening around him seems to take on a deeper significance than it would possess for ... and me. He is the wanderer ... ears and eyes always are ...

... of a jaunt through ... of Germany and Austria ... Berlin"; but though ... atches the surface ... he likewise in... chapters on ... nna and Buda... his scant ... tongue, ... side there ... n birth; ... nich, to ... walking ... n vil... knew ... d not ... nage ... ate ...

that my knees had been bare like that oftener than not; I had always, I felt, worn shoes stoutly sewed to such stout, nail-studded soles. Fragmentary visions of mountain sides deep, glacial mountain lakes, high flowering meadows, poured through my mind I heard in imagination the copper bells on mountain cattle and clear musical calls across little valleys

He goes into a great restaurant in Berlin and dances, as is customary, with a girl who is poor—all the people there were poor in this period of reconstruction—and he gives her the food she could never have ordered.

He takes her to her humble dwelling in a taxi—a good forty minutes' ride; and she is speechless in this interval of splendor that has come like a glimpse of paradise into the drab procession of her days. It is in such passages that Mr. Hergesheimer, the novelist, shines forth above Mr. Hergesheimer, the essayist.

Munich was old and tired to him, after the blatant gayeties of Berlin

"The light, filtering through the linden leaves, was subdued and curiously green; the beer garden, set in the darkness of Munich, was gloomy. It was, at the same time, pictorial, enveloped in a repressed harmony of color.

"The faces of the drunken countrymen, the three solemn boys, the bemused lovers, were parts of a single movement, a given moment, of life. The beer garden, the alien tongue, the aqueous light and heavy shadows, succeeded, at last, ... depressing me, and I left suddenly."

... it was in Munich that Mr. ...esheimer ran into a girl who ... in cabarets, and who trans... the words of a sad song she had composed—a girl of tragic import, because she would not compromise with life. And later, there was a young man, now neither rich nor poor, to whose lodgings he went; and in the brief glimpses we get of these two a flood of understanding comes to us

The man had, while he was yet young, come to the end of his world and resources. Nothing could happen that would stir him into a renewed vitality. He was young, but he belonged by temperament, to the past

In Budapest Mr. Hergesheimer met a Hungarian girl one Lili, and through her the city came to take on new meanings, though there was but one chance encounter. A flash like this, however, makes Budapest known to us, too. How does Mr. Hergesheimer get such magic into a few paragraphs—at most into a few pages?

We see the moon with him; the dancers in their yellow dresses and blue uniforms, flitting by his table; we get the loneliness of the city streets, and we feel his solitude after the girl Lili has rung the concierge's bell, and vanished forever from his sight

Back in Palm Beach, where he is writing his book, Mr. Hergesheimer thinks of those he met in the Old World cities; and I think no one has ever put down a truer picture of life as it is today, with its sharp contrasts, its cruel changes, its puzzling rebellions, and yet its will to go on. Even the dreamlike beauty of Palm Beach with its white freesias, starlike narcissus, and bourgainvillaea, seemed unreal to him—immaterial. It, too, was a part of the past, nothing about it was secure.

With great art and a sense of the solemnity of the time, Mr. Hergesheimer has written a memorable book, and his publisher, Alfred Knopf, must be proud to add it to his list. I hope it will be widely read and carefully digested.

SPORTSMANSHIP IN LOVE - MISS FAIRFAX

It Is Needed in Marriage to Keep the Home Happy and Free of Misunderstandings

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

AMERICAN marriages are supposed to be the most romantic in the world. We are told that an American bride is guided in her choice by love only, that no material or worldly consideration ever enters her mind. To a certain degree this is, of course, true

That is, in Europe marriages are arranged by the parents; in our own country young people usually settle their own romantic destinies.

But if love ever was the whole story in American marriages, I question whether this is any longer the case. A new element seems to have entered into practically all marriages, and it's a pretty desirable one. It is sportsmanship.

FOUNTAIN OF TEARS

Only a few days ago I found the engaged daughter of a friend of mine an unchecked fountain of tears

"It's so tragic for Joan," murmured the sympathetic mother. "The income she and Billy were to have married on has been reduced by three-fourths. She will have to do without all the nice things she has been used to."

"But she's in love with Billy," isn't she?"

"Oh, tremendously! But the poor dear did so want a pretty home and all that!"

For my own part, I couldn't squeeze out a tear for Joan.. If she's really in love, I thought, here's a chance to prove it. Here's a chance to be a good sport, and to confirm all the fine things that have been said about love

HASH FOR DINNER

I'm even convinced that their marriage will be more rather than less happy, if Joan and Billy begin by living in two rooms, and if Billy helps with the dishes, and if they often have hash for dinner.

What if Joan does miss the use of her parents' car? What if she does lament the lost whiteness of her hands? Somebody should whisper to her that in an age of breadlines it's soft and selfish to bewail the vanishing of one's personal luxuries.

Doing without things can be very educating Joan will be a much better woman, late on, for these early lessons in being a good sport

Sportsmanship as an element of present-day marriages can't very well be ignored. Let American marriages continue to be as romantic as possible, but let the love they are based on be real.

Can't Imagine Why She's Not Popular

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

When I meet boys all they do is look at me once and forget me What's wrong? I'm not bad looking, but they say looks have nothing to do with it I'm not a flashy dresser and not a dull one I'm considered the best sport in the crowd I don't "neck." I'm not prudish, fault-finding, snobbish or selfish If need be, I can be the "life of the party." I'm not shy and not too forward. I have a temper, but my friends have never seen me angry. I can take a joke as well as any of them and pass over others without even considering them. I don't drink or smoke, but I'm by no means a goody-goody." Can you advise me? Also I'm the oddest girl in the crowd and the only one without a boy friend. A. D

Dear A. D.—Perhaps you may be so conscious of being the only girl in your group without a boy friend that you're too eager to please. Often this is the case and it scares boys to the point of fading away from the picture I've noticed pretty, attractive well-dressed girls throw such flip-flops of delight if a boy happened to be moderately polite that the boy in terror sought refuge with someone less attractive. I don't say this is true in your case Your letter, too long to print fully, tells me you're only 17. Let's assume, then, that your difficulty is perhaps only one of youth, for popularity, like everything else, has its technique. You have to know the rules, just as in piano playing.

EASY ON THE BUDGET

Chanel Dress of Fashioned Linen

SKETCHED IN PARIS

The Chanel dress in the sketch, appearing at first to be a rather elaborate gown of printed morocain, turns out to be fashioned of linen, printed in black on a white background. Both shoes, from Enzel, though of formal line, are designed to wear with summery dance frocks. One is of lame in white and gold, with little gold and silver straps lacing across the instep. The other, which follows sandal lines, but uses white satin strips to cover the heel and toe, is of ivory and silver, and fastens its tiny ankle strap with a strass buckle.

Refreshing Menus for Hot Days

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WHEN the temperature's high and the humidity seems unbearable, and we wish we could lie down beside the dog and pant with him, care needs to be used in planning menus that are refreshing, besides containing the nutrition we need

One of our first thoughts for cool, refreshing salads and desserts are the jellied kind. But there's always some one to rise up and say, "Oh, I hate jellied salads"—because they're thinking of the India rubber ones that so many people serve under this name. That's because their proportion of gelatine isn't right.

Gelatine needs to be more carefully measured than almost any other ingredient. It's so easy to scant, or heap the measuring spoon. Don't trust to your eye Measure the tablespoon of gelatine and then run the knife across the top of the spoon, making it exactly level. Then you'll have a quivery, clear, delectable jellied salad or dessert, that can be prepared in the morning for later use.

A jellied consomme to start a summer luncheon or dinner is mighty appetizing. Give it a double dose of seasoning, because it will lose part of the flavor as it chills. Here's how.

JELLIED CONSOMME
(6 servings)

Soak together for about five minutes 1 level tbsp. gelatine, ¼ cup cold water. Add softened gelatine to 2 cups hot soup stock (strained), 1 tsp. scraped onion, ½ tsp. salt, 1 tbsp. lemon juice, ⅛ tsp. cayenne pepper. Cool soup mixture until it thickens. To serve either, cut jellied soup into cubes and pile these in bouillon cups or beat the jellied soup with a fork and pile this frothy mixture into bouillon cups. Garnish soup with sprig of parsley and slice of lemon

And here's another salubrious summer salad

SUMMER SALAD

Soak together for about five minutes 1 level tbsp. gelatine and ¼ cup cold water. Add softened gelatine to 1 cup boiling water, ¼ cup sugar, ½ tsp. salt, ⅓ cup orange juice and 1 tbsp. lemon juice. Allow mixture to cool slightly and when starting to thicken add 1½ cups canned pineapple or any fruit salad mixture (cut in small pieces). Rinse individual molds in cold water and fill with fruit salad mixture. Put filled molds in refrigerator or in a cold place and allow to congeal. To serve unmold on lettuce arranged on individual salad plate and garnish with whipped cream or a fruit salad dressing

And a smacking good peach charlotte russe

PEACH CHARLOTTE RUSE
(6 servings)

Soak together for about five minutes 1 level tbsp. gelatine and ¼ cup of cold water. Dissolve softened gelatine over boiling water until it becomes liquid and then add to 1 cup peaches (either fresh or canned) mashed, ¼ cup lemon juice, ⅓ cup sugar, ¼ tsp salt. Cool mixture slightly and then fold in 1 cup cream or evaporated milk, whipped (measure before whipping). Arrange three to four ladyfingers (halved) or stale cake around side of sherbet glass and fill with dessert mixture. Place filled glasses in refrigerator, allowing dessert to become thoroughly chilled. Just before serving top dessert with a small amount of whipped cream if desired.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST

Daily True Story

Paid the Interest

C. BENNETT GORDON sat in his elegant swivel chair, bent over his elaborately designed solid mahogany desk and twiddled his thumbs.

Within 40 minutes he was due at a luncheon of the prominent business men to deliver a talk on finances, trade and efficiency.

C. Bennett Gordon was not a professional lecturer. He was a financial expert who had originally been a Wall St. statistician. At this moment he was adviser to a number of wealthy men-about-town who didn't know how to handle their inherited fortunes, and he was often consulted by trustees.

Then he placed his hands in his pockets and quickly drew them out.

The great financial expert had forgotten his wallet that morning and had spent all his change on the way to the office. Now he didn't have the taxi fare to carry him to the luncheon.

"Perhaps," he mused amusedly, "I ought to borrow it from the office boy."

TOOK THE PLUNGE

Mr. Gordon looked at his secretary. The same impression of neatness, charm and dependability that had led him to engage her six months previously—impinged itself upon his mind.

He was embarrassed—but he had to take the plunge.

"Er—Miss Wittington. You know no man is a hero to his wife—or lacking one—er—to his secretary."

Miss Wittington received the assertion with one of her endearing enigmatic smiles.

"I—er—" continued the financial genius, "accidentally forgot my wallet this morning. Can you, perhaps, spare me enough for a taxi to take me to the luncheon."

"With pleasure, Mr. Gordon."

When Mr. Gordon returned two and one-half hours later from the luncheon, he found several notes on his desk.

"C. B. G.—In looking over your day book I note you have made two dinner engagements for 7 p. m. Which do you wish to keep?"—Miss W."

"C. B. G.—The Barnstorm Department Store called. They claim you had ordered a new radio, but that your hotel refused to receive it, claiming no instructions had been left.—Miss W."

And finally a humorous note:

"C. B. G.—Miss Wittington demands 8 per cent interest on the loan she made you this morning—no man is a hero to his creditor. —Miss W."

C. Bennett Gordon, who among his other qualifications, possesses a sense of humor, smiled to himself. He had been thinking of Miss W. often out of office hours recently.

ACCEPTS OFFER

"Take a letter, Miss Wittington," declared C. Bennett Gordon. Here it is: "Dear Miss W.—Will you accept the 8 per cent interest in the form of a platinum wedding band?"—C. B. G."

Miss Wittington's physiognomy lost its competent composure. It became suffused with several shades of vermillion. After keeping her dainty mouth open for not too many seconds, she finally stuttered

"Can you give me the afternoon to think it over."

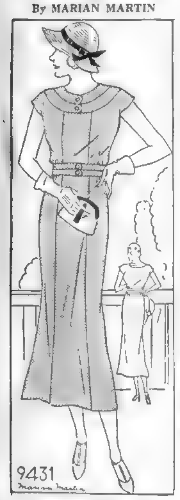

At 5 p. m. the office boy brought in a letter to Mr. Gordon

'Barber's Itch' Proves Most Contagious

ONE OF THE SKIN diseases appearing during the summer months is called "impetigo contagiosa." Children are the usual victims, but it may afflict adults. In men it involves the hairy part of the face and is commonly known as barber's itch."

Dr. Copeland

As its name implies, the ailment is a contagious inflammatory disease of the skin. It is infectious, being caused by a germ that is easily passed from one individual to another.

At first the skin contains many blisters filled with pus These blisters burst and dry on the skin, and the dried crusts appear to be stuck on, resembling wafers. Later the edges curl up and the crust drops off, leaving a reddish spot. This fades and eventually disappears.

This skin eruption is most common on the face and hands, but it may spread rapidly to the chest, fingers or legs.

This disease may be spread by infected dogs or cats, and where many children gather together, it is quickly transmitted from one child to another. In schools or in camps the disease is spread by infected towels and clothes, or by contact with infected persons. Adults sometimes acquire it in barber shops and beauty shops that are unsanitary, but more frequently they get it from children.

Impetigo is disagreeable, but fortunately never serious, except when it occurs in infants. Sometimes it is confused with eczema and psoriasis, but it differs from these diseases in that it rarely itches.

The affected skin should be thoroughly cleansed with soap and warm water. The crusts should be removed. An ointment prescribed by a physician should then be applied to the skin. A one to two per cent ammoniated mercury ointment is usually beneficial. Avoid using strong medicines or other remedies unless prescribed by your physician. Harm may result from the use of salve and ointments containing irritating ingredients.

With proper treatment, the disease should be cured in from one to three weeks. In severe cases stronger antiseptics may be necessary.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. L. E. S. Q.—What causes my heart to beat fast, especially when I retire at night?

A.—This may be due to nervousness. It would be wise to have your heart examined and follow your doctor's advice.

The Marry-Go-Round

Lop-Sided Love Affairs

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN A MAN gives up one woman for love of another, it is usually easy to win him back; but when he deserts her for love of variety or love of adventure, he will never return this side of Paradise one one side and all the luck on the other.

So many love affairs are lop-sided, with all the love sagging

The modern bridge club may not be such a worthy institution as was the old-fashioned sewing circle; but exchanging cigarettes and reducing secrets may be a healthier pastime, after all, than passing pound cake and dishing out scandal.

Most lovers' quarrels, as well as most domestic spats, arise from the efforts of one to demonstrate his (or her) superior intelligence—and the determination of the others not to be impressed.

• • •

And then there is "chandelier golf," which a man perfects in the living room at great expense - and promptly forgets on the links.

Many a man marries a quiet, restful little thing, who won't get on his nerves—and then finds life so placid that he looks around for a few wild, peppy women to help him to endure it.

And now we have with us the big butter-and-egg woman, to whom a smart car, a pair of Pekinese and a gigilo are just a part of the "overhead."

It's a deep, dark mystery to the average husband how his wife's light outfit of pajamas, stepins and backless dresses seem to take up three times the closet room her mother needed for her petticoats, flannels and mutton-leg sleeves.

Now that men have discovered both poles and all the continents, perhaps some great genius will arise among them and discover a comfortable substitute for a padded dinner coat on a hot July evening.

• • •

The tragedy of a man-charmer is not in facing the fact that she has passed her last primrose station, but in REFUSING to face it.

Hints From the Beauty Box

CAMOMILE brightens blonde hair. It is not a decided bleach, has to be used after each shampoo. Steep two tablespoonfuls of the leaves in a pint of water for several minutes, cool and strain. Pour over the head repeatedly after the hair has been shampooed. Very popular in Paris. But don't expect that it will make a light brown halo golden; it won't

TO MAKE freckles behave, to urge them to pack up and depart, apply a lotion made by combining four ounces of rubbing alcohol, two ounces of stronger rosewater, 15 drops of simple tincture of benzoin.

SMART AND SASSY is a new coiffure design. There is a side parting that suddenly changes its mind, goes scooting over to the forward top of the right ear. Front hair on the right side comes forward after the fashion of the wind blown, now pretty well blown to bits. At the left side the wave runs straight back, revealing the ear. A topsy-turvy design but smart.

Should Hostess Keep Prize?

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for the hostess to keep the prize at a bridge party if she has highest score?

D. N.

Yes, it is proper . . . I am always for the person who wins the prize keeping it. Of course, if she wishes to give the prize to someone, she may, but there is no reason why she should do this, and by no means should she feel that she must or should do this.

The Engagement Table

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Would it be all right to use paper napkins for an engagement table?
2. What should I say for a little speech to be put in the paper?

H. C

1. It would be far better form to use linen napkins.
2. I do not quite understand what you mean by this question. Would you be so kind as to write me again, and explain more fully, so that I may help you?

STYLE

Do you sport a bustle? Do you "lace up the back?" Do you wear high, buttoned shoes? Of course not. Those things are out of style—passé, as they say in Paris.

Then why, by the same token, should you do such an all-important thing as cook the family meals on an old-fashioned, back-number stove?

Cook electrically and be in style. Electric cooking is modern. It is the cooking style of the future for everyone, everywhere. But you can have it now by installing this wonderful new Graybar-CRAWFORD range which we are now selling at the lowest price ever for this quality range.

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

About the Pretty Ones:

At Pemberton Inn last mid-week . . . While the Anti-Tuberculosis dance benefit was in full swing . . . We picked petite Mrs. Al Kraft all bedecked in voluminous ruffles and billows of white organdy, for the cutest and most movie-stylish looking . . . Mrs. Joseph Daniels, in her antique garnet jewelry for the most decorated . . . Jade garbed Mrs. Henry Saphirstein for he most colorful . . . Mrs. Jesse Gilman, in a white absolutely backless creation and sequin cap, for the most startling, bizarre looking . . . Mrs. Joseph Klein for the most brilliant chatterer, and Mrs. Samuel Glickman (whose husband outdid the four Marx brothers combined for tomfoolery) for the most dignified . . . We just heard about the woman with more than enough gold living in New Hampshire, who commissioned a famous Hub woman portrait painter to paint her portrait . . . And insisted that she do so during the month of August, because she explained "I am much better looking during that month . . .

Who Wants to Argue It?

"Being an old maid is like death from drowning—a delightful sensation when you cease to struggle," was one world famous maiden's definition to us last week.

Gossip-Catty:

United Shoes George Lane secret has just leaked through and he's just beginning to hear from "the boys" about the gift he received last Yuletide from the Snappy Number . . . Who probably shopped in a hurry—or forgot to . . . and when he opened her gift to him he was a bit amazed with the "To Dad" card inside! . . . After looking over that car collision wreckage Saturday midnight, at Commonwealth ave. and Exeter st. may we suggest to Mr. Hultman that blinkers installed just above those "Come To A Stop" signs on the side streets leading into the avenue might be a great help and reminder to hasty-to-get-home motorists . . . And to those who're a bit confused with the thick foliage of the avenue . . . Our radio editor N. F. T. is lolling on the sands of the beach at Atlantic City this week . . . so he postcards . . . And from Montreal the mailman brings us word that Texas Guinan (now at the Frolics cabaret with her "international" gang) is playing the part of a school marm . . . And that her "Brides of the World" number is dedicated to Brigham Young's brother, Gettem Young. Give us this day our daily bride! . . . Same old Texas!

Meant Well

When pharmacist Daniel McGillicuddy was a candidate for Rep. for Ward 10 in Roxbury two years ago . . . One Roxbury man was enthusiastic and very much sold on Dan . . . He came to his headquarters for tire covers, placards 'n everything! . . . But Dan lost out by a small majority . . . Later he met his Roxbury enthusiast who said, "I was sure sorry to see you lose out. Why I had that car of mine all over the state of Maine and New Hampshire for two months!" . . . Which puzzled Dan no little . . . 'Til he found out later that the Roxburyite thought he was running for Senator! . . . And now Dan's counting on the same fellow-booster this fall, when he's in the same race again . . . But if the chap shows up you can wager that he and Dan will go into a huddle and know just which locality he'll tote those tire covers through!

Such Fun!

When a certain New England furniture store opened up right across the street from a furniture emporium long in the business . . . The new store's manager was delighted beyond all measure . . . When after an extensive newspaper campaign, he noticed that as soon as the doors flew open his store was jammed . . . Imagine his disappointment and then his wrath . . . When three hours later only four actual sales had been made . . . And he found out that his competitor across the street had hired fifty "shoppers" for the day . . . Who had managed to successfully keep his clerks busily employed answering questions, etc. . . . While the customers with cash and the will to spend it would trail out of the store raging because they couldn't be waited upon!

Rudy's in Town Again!

Besides doing all those shows daily at the "Met," Rudy Vallee is studying harmony and law . . . Since motion picture work is really his hobby it is not surprising to know that he has an amateur motion picture machine which he carries with him and uses a great deal . . . For mental interests we find that Rudy likes a good book and a chance in which to read it! . . . He's a great admirer of Maurice Le Blanc and Arsene Lupin . . . And during our Saturday night snooping around, we noticed that the roof front corner suite's windows of the Kenmore were all ablaze—'way into Sunday's early morn . . . So it must be that Rudy is burning the candle at both ends! . . . Well, Well, he's a great fellow when you know him and here's hoping he can enjoy those extra moments while he's in town—without the to-do that's usually in full swing when he's so-journeying in Beantown!

Lookin' Thru the Mail:

To Harry Cushing: We'll change those tickets for you [illegible] . . . How about some human interest items from Camp Bauercrest?

To Hyannis R. O. M.: As you've perhaps noticed we appreciated your items . . . You really have a snappy style of gossiping about things yourself! Hope you'll write again.

To Brookline's F. F. B.: The item appeared here ages ago . . . The photo a week ago Thursday or Friday (first editions) . . .

Charlie Ray Plans Film Comeback

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service.

Copyright 1932 by Universal Service Inc.

Los Angeles, July 25—After an absence of five long years Charlie Ray is going to make a brave attempt to return to the screen. He has been signed by I. E. Chadwick for Monogram Pictures and will make his return engagement in "The Girl from Calgary," co-starring with Fifi Dorsay.

There was no one in the days when Charles was riding high who could play the [illegible] country boy with the same pathos. He was going along very well when suddenly he became ambitious, produced pictures and turned out "The Courtship of Miles Standish." The failure of the picture changed Charlie's whole motion picture career. He was never able to come back again. And he lost not only his place as a screen actor but his fortune as well. Paul Whiteman and Leon D'Usseau will direct.

Louella O Parsons

Hollywood Chatter:

Maurice Chevalier certainly pulled a surprise move on Hollywood with his quick divorce action. I saw him two days before he sailed for Paris and he told me that when he returned in October Madame Chevalier would accompany him. Yvonne, herself, indicated to friends who saw her in Paris she was coming back, although she always admitted that she was lonely in Hollywood and missed her beloved France. On the occasions when Maurice and Yvonne were guests at social affairs he devoted himself to her, playing cards with her alone and not so much as looking or talking to other women. Madame Chevalier had the reputation of being very jealous of her popular husband. I should not be surprised if this jealousy were the real reason for his seeking his matrimonial freedom.

A Line or Two:

Most of the fans are really sincere in trying to get autographs of their favorite stars that we hate to even intimate with some of them it's a racket. Yet I regret it's true. Regis Toomey, coming out of the Brown Derby was about to sign an autograph when Dave Epstein, looking over his shoulder saw that the boy trying to get the autograph acted peculiarly. He was attempting to cover up the piece of paper which later proved to be a blank check. Paramount is going to get a story for Stuart Erwin and Alison Skipworth or know the reason why. Several people have been put on original ideas and the latest team to get busy is Mike Boyland and Harvey Gates. Mike Curtiz and not William Wellman will direct "20,000 Years in Sing Sing." Bette Davis gets the feminine lead.

Bette Davis

Beery in Role

Are you a baseball fan? If you are you know all about John McGraw, who is to baseball what the late Knute Rockne was to football. Well, Edwards Sedgwick, director, got the idea that the life of John McGraw would go very well on the screen so he is writing the story and Wallace Beery will play McGraw.

Snapshots of Hollywood

A hot tennis tournament Saturday afternoon at the home of MRS. AD SCHULBERG. The members of the Thirty Love Club put on the show. All Malibu hung over the fence to watch TIMMIE LANSING'S mother and brother arriving in town. They have taken a house in Beverly Hills. TIMMIE is the young New York debutante reported engaged to HOWARD HUGHES. TONY JOHNSON, one of the guests of MR. HUGHES, leaving for her home in New York. GEORGE LOUTHER, another HUGHES guest, leaving for Del Monte, San Francisco and Reno on a motor trip. EDWARD (MECCA) GRAHAM, accompanying him. BILLY BAKEWELL trying to make up his mind whether to go to Europe or accept a job in "All-America" at Universal. Preston S. Foster has his eye on a fast speed boat which he hopes to buy. INA CLAIRE causing great consternation and surprise at the Brown Derby in Vince st. by appearing dressed all in pink and carrying a pink muff. Looking like a million, too. JEAN HARLOW and her new husband, PAUL BERN, dining at the Beverly Hills Derby on the cook's night out. ERIC LINDEN on the Universal lot. Looks like a job. BUCK JONES showing the key to Boston to interested friends.

Big Double Bill on 3 Screens

The Fenway, Modern and Beacon have a pleasing double film program this week. A Frederick Lonsdale comedy, which means sparkling dialogue, features Gertrude Lawrence, a lady of great talent. The film is "Aren't We All."

Violet Heming and Ralph Bellamy make "Almost Married" interesting.

Fine Photoplay Backed Up by Splendid Bill on RKO Keith Stage

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Conrad Nagel in the best drama of the summer season, a rich screen treat, and another rare stage program, topped by Hobart Bosworth, the Miracle Man himself, and Russ Columbo, make the new RKO Keith [illegible] one of the palatial theater's peak offerings. The photoplay is "The Man Called Back," which possesses a strong theme, well knit and deftly directed, with acting of first class order.

[illegible] surgeon [illegible] London [illegible] somewhere down [illegible] There [illegible] [illegible] had quit him, intent on killing herself, but meeting with the surgeon in the distant land had salvaged her soul too.

[illegible] Director Robert Florey goes a special palm for helping make "The Man Called Back" a corking good melodrama, niftily directed and with understanding [illegible] imaginative touches.

Hobart Bosworth is a remarkable [illegible]. A great actor, [illegible] acting just him [illegible] superb as have been [illegible] 500 contributions [illegible] one feels, hearing [illegible] him in this offstage character that the man is [illegible] of the artist. It is no surprise then that the applause is tremendous, nothing short of an ovation, and the greatest outpouring accorded any [illegible] in many moons.

Bosworth, illustrating his talk with many pictures, goes into his career. How he first went to Southern California to woo health and landed in the first [illegible] ever made there. That was in 1909. Ever since he has been prominent in filmdom. Easy to see then that film fans will find his personal appearance a major event.

Russ Columbo and his banjo go [illegible] smash was too. That his admirers are legion, is evident. He has his own style; it is unique and pleasing. Russ is a [illegible] modest chap, which makes him the more attractive. He sings in the Columbo manner, and the orchestra plays in the fashion that has made it famous over the radio.

Other good acts are contributed by Fortunello and Cirillino, the Louis Mosconi dancers, Ritchy Craig, Jr., Joe Morris and his company, and Micahua, Brazilian wire performer. Larry Flint and his house orchestra grow in favor and this week win new plaudits with their "Oriental [illegible]" finely done.

RADIO OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Air Executives Anticipate Campaign

By N. F. T.

Predictions are abroad aplenty as to how much this coming presidential battle of the century will net the radio realm.

Fond hopes among the higher ups run into millions (meaning dollars of course) and certainly there shall be that many words thus Republican and Democratic funds are being marshalled from Maine to California so as to buy enough time on both networks to forcibly impress the American armchair army voting vanguard of a nation.

WELCOME WAITING

Hub broadcasting stations will welcome the much desired money. One local program man recently admitted the programs might be a bit topheavy with campaign talk before long. But revenue derived will make it possible to do worth while things on the air after it is all over, when winter snows keep us indoors, hard by the old loud speaker.

Somehow the deluge of discussion bound to hit the microphones shortly doesn't hold any horror at all. Much is likely to depend upon the outcome of the forthcoming election, consequently adequate interest is likely to be shown by listeners.

ANCIENT AIRS

Nat Shilkret, Norman Brokenshire and Alex Gray have worked out an offering of old-time melody for tomorrow night (WNAC) at 10. Such never to be forgotten tunes as "After the Ball Was Over," "On a Bicycle Built for Two," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and others will be featured.

Tuesday is an odd day to put out "Murder on Monday," but the "Crime Club" program presents that detective thriller tomorrow night also (WNAC) between 9.30 and 10 o'clock.

• • •

Blessings on Kate Smith again. Last Friday night a Washington hotel wanted her to do a special engagement there. It being her home town, she countered with a proposition to the effect that she would work gratis if the management would take the proceeds and divide same between three war veterans hospitals of the capital city. What a gal is Kate Smith! They agreed and she did her part.

Our Lynn Lancer who feeds the "Colyum" snappy bits from time to time, insist that David Rosenthal is the proper peg for one we know on the waves as David Ross.

• • •

STILL SMOULDERING

There's more agitation over the more or less undercover fight between music publishers and radio rajahs regarding more money for the use of copyrighted compositions. Certain smaller tune men think an open meeting of all publishers, big and little, should pass on what will be done, rather than leaving it to the few on the present committee. This situation bids fair to shaping into a lively scrap before it is finally settled.

On the Air

Talk stock drops. For the first three months of this yr. talk on CBS has dwindled to 20 per cent, a 4 per cent decrease from last yr.

Quick, Watson, a sponsor to boost back the average. Who says list'rs can't take it? Wait until they tack on the political conventions talk to the average. They'll find everything has been thrown to the wind.

Mort Downey and Sid Gary will alternate on CBS on each coming Mon. Wed. and Fri. . . . A survey just concluded shows that between 7 and 8 p. m. WBZ attracts the majority of list'rs, due, no doubt, to Amos 'n' Andy; between the hrs. of 3 and 5 WAAB is the main drawer, thanks to the ball game; and strangely enough the phonograph record hr. on WNAC at 1 p. m. is the third most popular p'gram . . . NBC intends establishing its San Francisco outlet as a key station for several p'grams . . . Between now and Sept. 3 CBS will b'cast 14 horse races . . . A reader who signs himself "B. V. D." says the Amos 'n' Andy an'ncer's name is Bill Hay, and not Bill Hay. Mr. D. adds he "knew him when." So what? "Extremists suggest suspension of b'dcasting for six months to determine what influence radio might have toward bringing on freak elements."—N. F. T.

The best local popular p'gram aired in many months is WBZed at 11.30 tonight when the two RKO theaters sent forth to the mike Russ Columbo, Hobart Bosworth, Edna Leedom, Landt Trio and White and Richy Craig. Columbo and the last two mentioned are or have been mike stars on their own p'grams—and here they come all at once . . . WNAC's 10th anniversary party will be CBSed July 31 with practically the entire staff participating . . . Bernie Fazioli, composer and orch. leader at Coconut Grove and Seaglades, has organized his own band and will be heard on the air in the fall. A night club spot is in the offing . . . Hill Billy George, who learned mountain tunes in the fastness of Cambridge will receive sponsorial recognition on WNAC starting Fri.

TOWNS GET OLD AGE AID BILLS

Cities and towns are today receiving their 1932 special state tax bills, amounting in the aggregate to $1,275,027, from Tax Commissioner Long.

The revenue is credited to a fund out of which reimbursements are to be made to the municipalities for the full amount of expenditures for old age assistance from July 1, 1931, to April 30, 1932.

The cities and towns obtain the revenue for the state by collecting a $1 head tax from each male more than 20.

Commissioner Long says that the net amount now in the fund created by the 1931 assessment amounts to $1,234,764, which with the 1932 assessments added, less estimated refunds, will bring the fund up to $2,483,424. This amount will meet the cost of old age assistance from July 1, 1931, to April 30, 1932, estimated at approximately $2,400,000.

Two Lynn Men Held in Probe of Racket

Thomas Karydis, of Harbor st., Lynn and Stanley Pacevicz, of H[illegible]ton et., Lynn, were arrested yesterday at gun point for robbery by Lynn police headed by Sergt. William J. Murphy.

Police claim that the two men are part of a mob of hi-jackers who have committed hold-ups all over the state in the newest form of racketeering. Saturday night police allege, they backed a truck up to the variety store of George Quint, covered John Vernon, a clerk, with a gun while they ripped a candy slot machine from the walls and made off with it. The same thing was repeated a short time later in Salem.

Dorchester's 'Boudoir Bandit' Active Again

U.S. CHAMBER IN MILWAUKEE PLAN STUDY

Milwaukee, July 25 (AP)—A Milwaukee plan to push prosperity around that stubborn corner will be considered early in August by the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, it was announced here today.

Proposed by the Milwaukee Association of Commerce, the plan attracted the interest of Henry I. Harriman, Boston, president of the National Chamber. He assured the Milwaukee association it would be passed on to the Chamber for possible adoption.

Meanwhile outlines of the plan distributed by the Milwaukee Association, are being studied by Commerce associations throughout the land. Unorganized citizens also have been pondering the suggestion and the Milwaukee association has become, unexpectedly, a clearing house for prosperity plans.

A "consumer-purchase-commitment" program the economists call the Milwaukee suggestion.

"More simply," said Harry B. Hall, president of the association and head of a firm of appraisers, "We propose to ask every employed American to promise to buy something he needs, and promise to buy, it is important to note, only on condition that he will keep his present job or get a better one.

"Take out of the mind of the worker the numbing fear that he will lose his employment, and you will find the worker is willing to spend a dollar. That dollar will make itself felt throughout the economic structure and in the end it will create a new job."

The Milwaukee association asks that the Chamber of Commerce set the machinery of its organization—temporarily dropping every other activity if necessary—to haul prosperity back.

SOAP'S VOLUME OF SALES UP

Procter & Gamble reports earnings for year ending June 30, after all reserves and charges for depreciation have been deducted but before certain extraordinary adjustments in the values of the company's inventories were made as $18,043,034.

In order to bring inventories down to current market of June 30, 1932, a further sum of $8,910,487 was deducted, making the net profit for the year $9,132,545. Net income for the year ended June 30, 1931, was $22,50[illegible],818.

The volume of sales measured in dollars is twenty-five per cent less than last year, but tonnage is off but eight per cent.

In a message to stockholders accompanying the annual statement Col. William Cooper Procter, chairman of the board, said in part:

"The company's cash and liquid securities are greater in amount than ever before. Inventories of raw materials and finished products on hand are on the basis of the current market, the lowest of which we have any record. Investments are listed at their actual market price on June 30, 1932, so that in every particular the company's annual statement is based on prices in effect on that date. Expenses have been reduced and economies effected in conformity with present day conditions and it is the belief of the management that our business is on a sound operating basis."

DOES THE RALLY MEAN REAL RECOVERY?

By B. C. FORBES

BIG EVENTS

The magnitudinous importance and significance of the Interstate Commerce Commission's approval of forming four colossal eastern railway combinations hasn't been adequately grasped.

From the Ottawa conference may come historic remolding of world economic channels.

The setting up of a dictatorship in Germany may lead to far-reaching changes in the Continental political structure.

Britain announces the success of her colossal conversion of 5 per cent obligations into 3½ per cent, reflecting faith alike in the government and the nation's future.

Classifiable among "big events" are the improvement in the general price level here, the cessation of gold exports, the sustained betterment in bond and stock prices.

The new law providing for the creation of eight to 12 banks to aid home owners and to encourage home-building may or may not prove of first rank importance.

Geneva has yielded nothing decisive.

Rail Merger Too Long Delayed

The most notable development, in my opinion, is the pronounced improvement in the mental attitude in the financial world and, to some extent, in the business and industrial world. In the very biggest circles there has been notable lessening of apprehension.

While it cannot be said that "nerve" has yet taken the place of nervousness, at least there has been more disposition to act affirmatively, to act constructively rather than destructively, to increase rather than reduce purchases of investments, material and merchandise.

Among responsible men of affairs there has been a reappraising of the outlook. Not so long ago the odds against definite recovery toward the end of this year were regarded as at least 2 to 1. The odds are now regarded as 2 to 1 in favor of recovery.

Had the commerce commission acted far more promptly, the effect unquestionably would have been greater. Railway credit has become so impaired that few, if any, systems are likely to attempt to offer new securities to the public to obtain funds for consummating the sanctioned combinations. Perhaps, however, the Reconstruction Corporation may adopt a liberal co-operative policy in order to stimulate realignments which would provide considerable employment.

The decision may prove the forerunner of a modification of the whole official attitude toward business co-operation, conciliation and even combination. Recasting of our antiquated, anti-trust laws would be in harmony with the rail decree. Since it is adjudged in the public interest for heads of railway systems to get together to co-operate in effecting far-flung agreements looking to economy and efficiency, is it not logical to reason that a similar attitude will be adopted toward industry?

Recovery May Be Here

Business and commodity news still is mixed. This is entirely natural, because the initial stages of recovery invariably are marked by irregularity. The pace and the price improve here and there simultaneously with lagging in other directions.

It is too early to declare unqualifiedly that the permanent turn is here. Nevertheless, recent events—agricultural, banking, monetary investment, etc.—have contained more encouragement than did any earlier rallies.

If the rising hopefulness at the top communicates itself all along the line and is transformed into a substantial increase in actual consumptive demand, this latest rally may easily expand into real and lasting recovery.

RISE IN BOND MARKET MOST IMPORTANT

By FRANK H. MELOON

Steady rise of the bond market has been probably the most favorable of all recent visible developments, not even excepting the climb of commodity prices. One important banker remarked it was an historic event when he first heard of the formation of the $100,000,000 bond pool as we gave the up-to-the-minutes announcement in an address before a group of Middlesex bankers. The work of this pool has beyond question been most constructive in connection with the progress of recovery, having a very powerful psychological effect.

President Charles Belknap of Monsanto Chemical Works, the Merrimac Chemical division of which is at Everett, tells me today:

"Operations first six months of 1932 yielded profit after all charges of $534,221.16 equal to $1.24½ share on 429,000 outstanding. This compares with $671,454.34, or $1.56½ a share for same period of 1931. Gratifying to report dividend for year thus practically covered during first half. Result reflects manufacturing and other economies, new products and distinct betterment in British operations."

View we find taken in State St. circles of the British trade conference at Ottawa differs from that most widely published in that no threat to United States industry is seen. Well-informed observers feel that anything the Ottawa conference achieves in the way of stabilizing conditions and effecting improvement within the British empire will make for the good of the world in general.

One good effect of the 3-cent domestic postage rate is that business and financial leaders will not now forget the rate on letters to Canada has been advanced from 2 to 3 cents. The domestic rate, in other words, is now the same as the foreign. Incidentally we see no reason to change the opinion originally offered here that the needlessly increased postage rates would cause a big falling off in mail.

"New Hampshire plan" appears to us to differ in no marked degree from that already in use over a rather wide area. One State St. observer says that, while relief plans are labeled as spreading employment, most of them might equally well be termed spreaders of unemployment. "Robbing Peter to pay Paul" was an old saying, recalled by the method of taking away part of one man's employment to help another, advisable though it may be under special circumstances.

One can hardly help thinking that if so-called "public welfare" work were properly administered, it would not be necessary to experiment with throwing the proverbial monkey wrenches into industrial machinery.

Woburn After Loan

Woburn will receive bids until 11.30 a. m., July 29, for $39,000 water mains loan dated August 1 and due 1933 to 1937. Bidder to name rate of interest in multiples of ¼ of 1 per cent.

Coca-Cola Puts Off Meet

STATE ST. Hears:

That the tactics of bullish manipulators changed as expected. The leader issues were trotted out and put through their paces. The general effect was about as anticipated, with small traders turning distinctly friendly toward the market. The only trouble is that those who now go bullish are buying on top of considerable rises, especially among the cheaper shares.

Market Outlook

The skeptics, and there are many, expect the market will exhaust its technical strength sometime this week. It must not be inferred that this group fail to see any cheer in the business outlook. They see trade improvement, but cannot see the market discounting it so early in the game.

As they point out, nearly every bull market gets going in a slow, measured sort of way, that is usually marked by at least one false start. Upswings from a low which developed after excessive deflation are rarely fast. Careful trading at such times is necessary.

If any sort of a bulge is followed the chances are that buyers will help relieve liquidating pools of stocks that contain little promise for the next bull term. Accordingly, tape watchers want to beware of hectic attempts to start the public buying this week.

Ticker Talk

A situation which parallels that now existing in the markets arose in 1921. After the June low in that year a midsummer bulge attracted many buyers. It was the false start and the real lows came in August. Good buying opportunities were present well into the fall.

Informed quarters say that Gold Dust probably will fail to earn the regular of $1.60. Presumably this means a cut to around $1. Overhead and production expenses are under control and slight upturn would step earnings up at a faster rate than before, so it should not be overlooked.

Despite the cheer that many bullish operators profess to see in the narrow movement of Saturday, it is a fact that similar "pinch outs" in the last month or so have forecast near term reactions. Traders who insist on buying might wait and see the result.

Boardroom Briefs

The list is harboring plenty of shorts and it should be remembered skepticism means the sidelines and not short selling . . . This is particularly true of U. S. Steel, where a little too much emphasis has been put on current operations.

Lack of tangible pickup in the construction industry has resulted in rumors of omission of Johns Manville's preferred dividend . . . Some of the fastest in and out traders in the business are said to be behind the move in Industrial Alcohol . . . It could fade faster.

Boston buying is thought responsible for the headway made by Texas Corporation . . . This one has always been well liked in and around State Street . . . The oils have had quite a run and publicity is bringing in outsiders for the insiders to sell to.

H. E. B.

SPECTATOR Says:

Wall Street has a background of optimism as the new week opens. The action of the market has been most encouraging in that there was no great pressure on the reactions and profit-taking has been well absorbed.

Further irregularity today would not be surprising, but technically the market suggests somewhat higher prices.

"Shoot the Works"

The feeling is growing that the administration is going to "shoot the works" this summer in an effort to turn business up.

The huge reservoirs of credit in the Concentration Corporation and in the banks will undoubtedly be used in the campaign . . .

Along with this, efforts to stimulate commodities, such as the $30,000,000 wheat pool revealed here the other day, seem logical.

It would be well to continue open-minded about the immediate course of prices and follow the trend as it defines itself.

Here and There

Reports from the steel industry tell of an encouraging increase of inquiries for autumn...Some steel men, 'tis said, feel more hopeful than in more than a year...The self-liquidating projects which the Reconstruction Corporation will finance will undoubtedly involve a lot of steel...

Then, too, the rails may lend a hand later if they are able to get out of the red . . . It is well to remember, however, that the steels need a big reversal in earnings to justify even present prices.

STOCKS STEADY IN NEW YORK DEALINGS

New York, July 25—Important shares were steady in afternoon tradin gon the New York Stock Exchange today. The market opened the new week with a burst of strength in active trading. Gains of a point were common while some of the more volatile specialties ran up 2 to 3 points and more.

Reading was outstanding with a maximum spurt of more than three points on its good earnings showing for the first six months. At the same time Delaware & Hudson rose two points. Atchison led the active group with a rise of more than a point while Union Pacific was strong.

STEEL PREFERRED UP

U. S. Steel preferred was another outstanding spot, soon rising more than three points on reports the regular dividend would be declared tomorrow. The spectacular Auburn, simultaneously, jumped about three points while other specialties like Eastman Kodak, Coca Cola and International Business Machines were up sharply.

The accord reached at the international petroleum conference in Paris provided fresh stimulus to the oils. Atlantic Refining again featured by going to a new high for the year. Standard of New Jersey led the rest of the group to new high ground for the move.

Reactionary tendencies developed at the end of the first hour due to a sell-off in wheat on the fight between the government and the board of trade over the former's effort to close the wheat pit. Cotton was easy. Bonds were again higher.

Leading stocks were all better. U. S. Steel common gained fractionally, while American Telephone at one time was up nearly 2 points. General Motors was firm despite its poor earnings. American Can and Allied Chemical added a point apiece. American Tobacco B led the tobaccos into new high ground for the advance.

BONDS ARE HIGHER

Bond market sentiment maintained its cheerful tone over the week-end, and further improvement was manifested in today's session.

The railroads, recently spectacular performers, extended their rally, and a number of utilities and industrials lians continued their forward movement. United States government issues were steady to firm.

Of particular interest to investors was the treasury offering today of $650,000,000 in notes. Half of the total amount will run for two years at 2¼ per cent interest, while the other half will carry 3¼ per cent and mature in four years. About one-third of the aggregate will be used to refund indebtedness due August 1, while the remainder will go to meet current requirements of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

$942,000,000 Surplus for Federal Reserve Banks

Washington, July 25 (AP)—One quasi-federal agency has more than enough gold to back up the currency while an integral part of the government—the treasury—today is borrowing $650,000,000 for relief and other financial needs.

The Federal Reserve System's monthly report for June shows participating banks held $942,000,000 over the legal requirements for reserves against deposits and currency. And the treasury today offers for sale $650,000,000 in notes.

Of the $650,000,000 total, $227,631,000 will be used to refund indebtedness. The rest will provide relief funds and other money to run the government for the time being.

Much of the new money will go to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which has not yet got the $1,800,000,000 authorized for it by the $2,122,000,000 Relief Act.

Loans from this additional fund, including the $300,000,000 allocated to states for destitution relief, will not, however, be made until the corporation completes its policies and makes surveys.

Full speed in the relief drive awaits completion of the corporation's directorate, two men for which President Hoover must find this week.

One series of the treasury's new note issue, for $325,000,000, is to run for two years and bear 2¼ per cent interest, the other, for an identical amount, will run four years at 3¼ per cent.

The Reserve Board's monthly review says that in May and June $425,000,000 of the country's monetary gold stock was withdrawn and that by the middle of the latter month the remaining balances held in this country by foreign central banks were comparatively small. Toward the end of June, it adds, there was in increase in gold stocks.

TODAY'S NEWS OF LEADERS

RISING prices for securities have exerted immediate influence on sentiment. The latter unquestionably has improved at a rapid pace, perhaps too rapid. However, in the revived hopes of speculators there is no time for misgivings; the fact that the markets have displayed ability to advance has been sufficient excuse for a mild celebration.

That the upturn in the stock list may have primarily developed out of a favorable internal, or technical position of the market, was overlooked in the spreading optimism.

Modest Pace of Recovery Pleasing

The accomplishment of the market rise has been sufficient unto itself, the cause secondary, and to a degree this attitude appears warranted. For a long time nothing but liquidation was witnessed. Suddenly, there was a let-up in the selling. The market immediately responded with the most impressive recovery in months. One of the genuinely satisfying results has been the modest pace of the advance, when measured with the colossal fall.

Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc. reports net earnings of $364,168.54 for the third fiscal quarter ending June 30, 1932. This amounts to 71 cents per share, compared with 3½ cents per share earned during the first six months of the fiscal year.

Cash position of the corporation is given as Current assets $4,576,774.05; current liabilities $842,740.01; net current assets or working capital $3,734,034.04; ratio of current assets to current liabilities 5.43 to 1. Cash and investments were $2,877,180.91.

"The present upward trend of sales," F. D. Saylor, president, states, "indicates that to end the present quarter, and hence the fiscal year, with our dividends fully earned, will not be a too difficult task."

The company's new plant at Los Angeles, built to supply California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, New Mexico, Utah and Nevada, has started bottling operations.

"The opening of this plant," Mr. Saylor states, "has made possible a reduction of prices in these Western states. Sales to date from the new plant have been gratifying and this territory from now on will far exceed its previous proportion of the company's total sales volume."

Grains React After Starting With Rise

Chicago, July 25 (AP)—Dry weather in spring wheat territory and over much of the corn belt gave an upward trend to grain prices early today. Threatened federal suspension of the Board of Trade had no apparent market effect. Opening ⅛-½ higher, wheat afterward reacted somewhat. Corn started unchanged to ¼ up and subsequently sagged.

OUR DAILY PUZZLE

(N. Y. Herald Tribune)

"The English language makes it easily possible to express ourselves without equivocation or euphemistic circumlocution."

BEDSIDE DRAMA

According to Dr. William Harvey King, a patient can often be saved by laughter, which sometimes does more than medicine to strengthen the will to live.

Three physicians are in consultation.

Scene—Hospital.

Doctor No. 1—It's a very critical case.

Doctor No. 3—I presume you have tried mugging?

Doctor No. 1—Yes. I mugged. I also tried wearing the ladies' hats.

Doctor No. 2—I see by the chart that he gave you the bird.

Doctor No. 1—Well, I don't like to go ahead without a consultation. What do you advise?

Doctor No. 1—What is that?

Doctor No. 2—There's no time to lose. You'll have to use emergency measures. Gentlemen, I feel that, in a case like this, we are justified in telling the patient a strong story. In fact a smoking room story.

Doctor No. 3—That would be my advice.

Doctor No. 1—Very well, gentlemen. As soon as he wakens I will tell him about the farmer's daughter and the traveling salesman.

Thirty Minutes Later.

Doctor No. 1 emerges smiling from the patient's room. He is rubbing the palms of his hands together. The other two doctors eagerly await the report.

Doctor No. 2—How did the treatment come out?

Doctor No. 3—Successful?

Doctor No. 1—Gentlemen, I am highly pleased with the result. He reacted marvelously. Laugh! I thought he'd die!

The Voice ✦ of ✦ Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Prattle and Tattle!

Up in the Arctic Circle it's 30 degrees below zero today, folks, if that'll help, and a Munich professor named Dorsig insists that there's no such thing as heat or cold—it's all a state of mind. In spite of that, Jan Rubini's wife is preparing to toss an alienation suit against Estelle Taylor, who's constantly in Jan's company these days and Max Hart, the well known booking agent, and his wife are pouting. Al Siegel, once the spouse of the thigh-quivering songstress, Bee Palmer, is now courting Mary Duncan in the open manner while his intimate buddy, Walter Kane, is escorting Ethel Barrymore Colt around the better spots of Brawlywood. So you see, life goes on just the same in the regular and well grooved channels despite the heat. Dorothy Dell, for instance, who for a brief spell was enticing sighs from Jack Dempsey, is now Purring and Cooing with the musical Ray Hoskins. There's nothing romantic, of course, in a statistical tidbit I've just unearthed but someone may go into a fever over it—I mean the fact that they've figured out that 4 tons of hamburger sandwiches were sold at Jones Beach last Sunday. Incidentally, A. C. Blumenthal, who has taken charge of the late Flo Ziegfeld's affairs told me yesterday that he's doing it in the hopes of keeping something like 200 people at work and being able to make some sort of profit to turn over to the showman's estate. Peggy Fears, his wife, once a Ziegfeld slave, will assist him in managing "Show Boat" and one of Blumey's first steps was to make the principals accede to drastic cuts. Quiet, but susceptible Georgie Raft, his throb over Billie Dove subdued, is now palpitatin' over Mills Sonde and Dudley Field Malone, looking forlorn when I met him in Reuben's Wednesday night, admitted he was lonesome for his wife and new baby in the South of France and leaves Wednesday to join them. Poor Willie Moore, the restaurateur, has broken his leg again.

Kay Crothers, whose heart used to beat in ¾ time to Walter Donaldson's melodies, is at the sighing stage with Roe Kills, one of Paul Whiteman's Rhythm boys. Just how serious is Leon Errol's condition?—the lad of the rubber legs is still confined in the sanitarium. With Junior Laemmle having again (this makes the third time) re-established his romantic entente cordiale with Constance Cummings, Cecelia Parker and Noah Beery, Jr., both under voting age, are clutching the burning ember and waving it high for all to see. Reggie Venable, Fay Bainter's hubby, is sanitarium-bedded and William H. Collins, the lad whom they tried to send back to prison after howmanyyearswasit will draw his scot-free papers today in the final windup at the First District Magistrate's Court. The newest cycle of pictures will get under way within a few weeks—they'll deal with life in Bali, an island in Dutch East Indies—one tagged "Isle of Paradise" is already being shown but is purely travelogue. The next one will be one made by Andre Roosevelt, cousin of the late President, and will be followed by still another with a tragic theme. Add exploitation stunts: In Brooklyn, a small hosiery shop offers a glass of beer, free, with every purchase of a pair of hose. Allan Hudson and Mary Reid, dtr. of Whitelaw Reid, clung to each other through every dance at Montmartre Beach Club last Friday nite and in order to avoid the amusement tax, most of the summer playhouses have special tickets marked 40 cents for those who go down to their seats on passes.

President Hoover will receive the largest birthday card ever made on Aug. 10th. It will bear several hundred thousand names and is being sponsored by an Ernest Dudley Chase of Winchester, Mass. The operators of those "penni-hearts" games, step-cousin to roulette, are reaping a harvest out in Long Beach and another weekly throw-away makes its appearance shortly, to be tagged "Manhattan Spotlight," with Monte Prosser as the publisher. Grace Hegger Lewis, Sinclair Lewis' X, is completing her second novel, "Facing the Park," up in the Canada wilds and Sherwood Anderson having finally turned out his novel after seven years of playing around with it, leaves shortly for Russia. Hard-luck Mary Nolan who may debut at the Villa Richard shortly is hiding out here in one of the cheaper hotels and little Sally O'Neill enters the hospital today or tomorrow to go under the knife, poor kid. Pretty wavy Alice Rice, Ziegfeld beauty, tried to have two surplus pounds pounded off the other day — and now she's got to give up horseback riding for a week or two. Incidentally, Doris Andrese, the former Vanities beauty, leaves today or tomorrow for the Coast to start on her new picture contract. Because their lawyer told them the government would take most of their profits away for income taxes, the Marx brothers have decided not to make any more pictures for the present and "Daddy" Browning, believe it or not, is going in for charity work with the request that his name be withheld. Doesn't even want a picture of himself showing his muscles.

Jacques Renard, the orchestra leader, recovered from his recent illness, added 30 pounds to his 270 while sick in bed. Harold Ross, the New Yorker pilot, is laid up with stone bruises on his feet suffered while dunking his delicate puppies in a rippling brook last Sunday. Higher and higher burns the romantic flame between Lois Long (the ex-Mrs. Peter Arno) and Emanuel O'Brien.

NEW SERIES OF MEMORY TESTS

Well, here we are on the second lap of the new popular vaudeville identification contest which has proven such grand fun for readers of the Boston Evening American. The winners of last week's prizes will be announced in Wednesday's Boston Evening American.

Starting today, and running through Saturday, we will publish three pictures daily of famous RKO vaudeville stars, with hints as to their identities. You are to guess these stars' names correctly, filling the names in neatly directly under their pictures. Save them until the end of the week, and mail them all at once to Vaudeville Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

First prize in this contest is $25, second prize $15 and third prize $10. The next 25 winners will each receive a ticket to RKO Keith's Theater, where a seven-act bill of standard RKO Keith vaudeville is presented. Your entries must be postmarked no later than Monday, August 1, midnight. All readers of the Boston Evening American are eligible to enter except employes of the paper and RKO Theaters.

Today's pictures show a distinguished character actor of the movies who is now in RKO vaudeville, a little girl who has appeared in many movies, and a stage comedian who also went to Hollywood and made good. This entire trio originally started on the stage and all have returned to it in the last year. Know them?

HEARST PAPERS ADVOCATE

1—The five billion dollar loan to relieve unemployment and put billions of dollars into immediate circulation.

2—Adoption of 5 per cent sales tax and reduction in income taxes, releasing income to finance industry.

3—Immediate modification of the Volstead act, permitting light wines and beers, reviving industry and employment, providing government income, ending racketeering and restoring American personal liberty.

Let the Public Know Whom Taxpayers Are Furnishing Guns, Booze and Food

Sickening frauds in the giving out by the city of a million dollars or more a month of the taxpayers' money in unemployment relief have been proved by the Boston Evening American's expose, and are admitted by the authorities.

Officials, under orders from Mayor Curley and under his direction, are PRESUMED to be acting to halt this swindling, this actual support of crooks and thieves from public funds.

Police heads have turned over to various city officials a list of some 130 persons, arrested for various offenses and many of them parole violators, and all carrying the city's dole cards.

And the very first move in the supposed anti-swindling campaign is a suppression of this list! Several officials have access to the list. To date, every person who has this access seems animated solely by a determination to PREVENT the public finding out the identity of these lawbreakers who are being armed, rummed and fed by the city.

There may be some significance in the fact that the Boston Evening American is told that several of these known crooks on the dole list have a startling list of paroles and suspended sentences on their records, gifts from kindly judges and prosecutors. There may be some natural desire on the part of certain persons to have these RECORDS OF KINDLINESS TO CROOKS KEPT FROM THE PUBLIC.

Some of these swindlers probably have managed to retain their right to vote, despite their criminal records. The Boston Evening American HOPES that this fact has nothing to do with the suppression of this list.

The answer to these natural suspicions is, of course, IMMEDIATE RELEASE TO THE PUBLIC of not only this list of 130, but of full publicity for the investigation PRESUMED to have been asked from the police department of every one of the 25,000 dole cases now being fed and cared for out of city funds.

The taxpayers are ENTITLED to these FACTS.

No one politician or group of politicians has any right to use this supposed investigation for his own or their own purposes.

LET'S HAVE LIGHT, AND PLENTY OF IT.

If we must furnish our crooks with guns, ammunition, booze, soft beds and food, let us at least be in on the secret as to WHO THEY ARE!

Taxation, Retrenchment

The people are groaning under the weight of two oppressions—TAXATION and THE COST OF GOVERNMENT.

The two are inseparably connected. If the cost of Government—national, State and local—is not DRASTICALLY REDUCED, we shall have public bankruptcies on a growing scale.

If the burden of taxation is not lightened to the point where it ceases to be fatal to the nation's productive energies, we shall be faced by a steadily diminishing public revenue.

Thus, each of those oppressions aggravates the other.

Failure to curtail public expenditure blocks all efforts to lighten the burden of taxation upon the people's already strained resources. It is idle to look for any stoppage in the downward course of values or any turn in the direction of business recovery if as a people we are incapable, or if our institutions are unequal to the task, of FUNDAMENTALLY REDUCING, NOT PARING OR SLICING, the bloated cost of Government in the United States.

The taxable resources of the people are insufficient to bear the burden of these distended costs any longer.

The Democratic platform contains a brief but satisfactory declaration on the subject of retrenchment in the field of governmental cost. The urgency of this duty has been emphasized by Governor Roosevelt in his speech of acceptance.

Let theorists differ as to the mysteries of exchange and the interplay of gold and credit in the field of international trade.

If the United States cannot live within its income; if, in taxation, we cannot stop short of completely overwhelming the productive capacities of our people, then such other causes as contribute to our present difficulties may well be disregarded.

The test of our capacity to survive as a nation can be said to reside in our treatment at this time of these momentous subjects, TAXATION AND RETRENCHMENT.

The Juggernaut's Toll

Don't cuss the truck driver for any mishap at the crossing. It won't do any good; he may be a better cusser than you are, and he was probably right in the first place.

After studying some million traffic accidents the National Safety Council affirms that truck drivers deserve only praise. They are growing safer all the time, and passenger car drivers are getting worse.

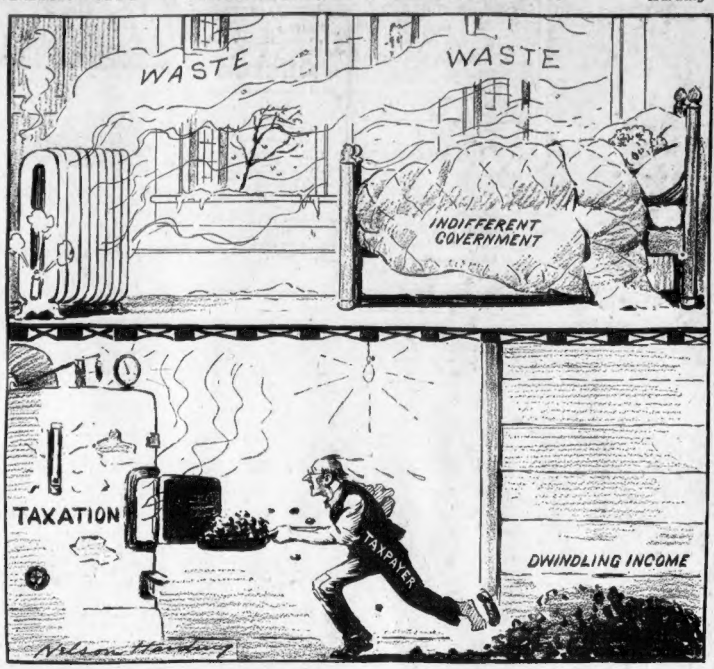

The Council hands a laurel to the truckmen and dispels another illusion by saying that the drunken driver is nowhere near so dangerous as the sober driver who is careless. Women drivers figure in only six per cent of fatal auto accidents.

The most impressive fact in the Council's report is that the deaths in traffic mishaps in 1931 were 33,500. The curve this year is expected to drop three per cent, but at that the United States tops the list of the motoring nations, with twice the death ratio of Canada and four times that of Germany.

The Council's plea for a "Traffic-Law Enforcement Month" in September has the sanction of both common sense and humanity.

New York Day by Day

Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, July 25—Diary of a modern Pepys: In a serene morning of delicate air, to the tram to meet Carl Seitz, of Shanghai, and a breakfast at the Biltmorg. Thence home and a gracious note from Helen Wills Moody, the tennis lady, to me the most personable of all athletic idols.

So boggling out my skit, and had a merry chat with Baird Leonard over the telephone. With my wife to the Dave Hamptons to a tea for the novelist, Harold Bell Wright, and his lady, newly come from Arizona. And we talked of the Missouri Ozarks, the pandemonium of the world and pot likker.

Dinner on the Waldorf's Starlight Roof, talking to June and Ray Lillibridge, Fay Marbe and others. Later to a play, but the evening so warm we took a horse drawn carriage for a turn of the park. And the old johu explained, "I allus take young folks the dark way," so flattering I bestowed an extra tuppence.

Joe Frisco's take-off of a house detective is an imitation of a quick rap on the door and "Get her out!" And Jay C. Flippen greets Kate Smith with "Hello, Folks!"

* * *

Among exhibits at the Hobby Show was the remains of a polecat called Shanghai Lil, placarded thus: "Shanghai Lil is safe inside

A cage (she's only lent).
She was caught in the depression,
So she hasn't got a scent."

A diversion of the cocktail hour is to search out pretty feminine names in the telephone book, phone them and explain the idea. I, e., would they join the merry-makers on a dare? A lady who met a gentleman in this capricious fashion in a Central Park South hotel three months ago is now his wife.

* * *

Vincent Astor's de luxe apartment house in East End avenue—Ring Lardner's street—features what is known in realty circles as a maisonette. It is a 17-room duplex with a private entrance and, at depression prices, is listed at $14,500 yearly.

* * *

In one of those mind-wandering flashes just then it occurred to me that the name of the actor, Oswald Perkins, starts off decidedly Mayfair and winds up completely country jake.

In most department stores a manicure was 75 cents. Today it is 35. Facials once $5 are now $2. But the biggest tumble is in male barbering, especially on the Bowery. One shop near Broome offers a 5-cent shave and a 10-cent haircut. And black eyes are now "un-moused" for a dime.

Jack Osterman is out front and riding hard among the pack of Broadway's smart talkers. He comes of theatrical lineage, the son of Jake Rosenthal, long a crack company manager, and his wife, Kathryn Osterman, a superb repertoire actress whose wide and luminous beaux yeux made her a sweetheart of the sticks. Young Osterman started early in variety and was later spotted in revues. A few years ago he starred in partial eclipse, but after a period of continence, foregoing hearty viands and living on lemon juice, he came back far thinner and much brighter. He has the puckish hair for the trigger stuff that gives the Rialto what it thinks is sophistication. Mark Hellinger, for instance, asked him how business was at a flopping show. "Fine," he exclaimed, "the second row was jammed."

Dramatic capsule: In an East 52d speakie, a philandering mother lurched into the washroom to find attendants trying to arouse her boarding school daughter, stretched on the floor in a gin stupor. She telephoned frantically to her husband, and in grim silence they accompanied the girl in an ambulance to a hospital. New York!

* * *

I confess to tingling fascination watching generously becred ladies from the side lines. But I remained too long next table to one in a cafe the other evening. Calling a captain and pointing to me, she hiccuped: "Tell that guy not to be such a hang arounder."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"As Much God as Ever!"

FEELING THAT life's a washout? Wondering what's the use of going on? I was feeling that way, too, this morning. Then I picked up this letter—

Dear Elsie Robinson:

I'm just another of those "forgotten people" who are living in hall bedrooms these days—tramping streets endlessly, uselessly, looking for jobs, counting the dwindling dimes in my purse, wondering how long I can hold out.

All this, however, isn't new to me. I have been this way many times before, and always managed to land on my feet; so just being broke doesn't discourage me. But there's something else lately that has completely broken my morale, and that's all this depression talk.

Elsie Robinson

Everyone I speak to has the same theme song, "hard times." Everyone has lost his or her grip and decided we're done for. Of course, you can't blame most of the people around here for being discouraged. Most of them haven't eaten decently for months. They look and feel like licked dogs. It's awful. And lately I've gotten as bad as the rest.

Recently I have been up against a constant temptation to kill myself. The thing's an obsession with a lot of us. Last night it became so bad that I had to leave the house. Perhaps if I weren't sitting there aching into nothingness, that five-story drop wouldn't seem so alluring!

So I went out and climbed a hill that rises back of the town. I have always loved that hill. It is beautiful to look down from there at night, at the blueness below, with the lights twinkling like fireflies. And the air is so sweet and still. In the past, I have always come down from there feeling made over.

But last night I couldn't see the beauty around me. I felt as if I had really come to the end of my trail—as if I'd used up everything I had.

And then the most amazing thing happened.

Just before I left my rooming house, the usual discussion was going on. Someone was saying "there's just as much gold as there ever was." They were saying it bitterly, as if it were the crowning injustice. And I suppose I felt the same way about it, for I'd been mumbling those same words to myself as I climbed that dreary hill.

And suddenly those words were wiped from my mind and, as plainly as though someone spoke, a voice seemed to say these other words, so like, yet so unlike—

"THERE'S JUST AS MUCH GOD AS THERE EVER WAS!"

Such bitter words when you're poor—"there's just as much gold"! Such wonderful words when you're poor—"there's just as much God"! Yet truly I heard them!

Perhaps you'll say I imagined it, or just remembered something I heard somewhere else. Perhaps. I don't know, and it doesn't matter. I only know I felt that Voice speaking in my heart, and now everything is changed. I feel absolutely safe and sure again, ready to go on.

I haven't a job yet, and the dimes are almost gone; but I know "there's just as much God as there ever was"—and he will take care of me.

MARGARET T. YOUNG.

Just as much God as there ever was!

Just as much of His beauty as when He made this lovely world.

Just as much of His power as when He swung the stars into place.

Just as much of His vision as when He molded dust and, breathing on it, changed that dust into a man.

And just as much of His love as when, through Christ, He said:

"ARE NOT TWO SPARROWS SOLD FOR A FARTHING? AND ONE OF THEM SHALL NOT FALL ON THE GROUND WITHOUT YOUR FATHER'S KNOWLEDGE . . . FEAR YE NOT, THEREFORE: YE ARE OF MORE VALUE THAN MANY SPARROWS."

Just as much God as ever. Forget the gold you've lost. Reach out to the God you have!

Just Folks

Crows

I sometimes think the noisy crows
Like squabbling men who come to blows,
Conventions old whereat they may
Discuss the issues of their day.
In woods, not very far from here,
The black-robed delegates appear,
And stationed on the tallest tree
The wily sentinel I see.
Soon rivaling all human dins,
A disputation loud begins.
'Tis plain the crows do not agree
On platform plank or policy.
Vociferously they debate
Beyond a doubt affairs of state,
And greet with boos or loud applause
Some eloquently uttered caws.
With clamor very much like man's
They imitate Republicans,
Or wrangling long I take it that's
A sign that they are Democrats.
But here's the question I propose:
Are crows like men or men like crows?

THIS HAS BEEN a spectacular month for the dictators, and no one, aside from these, knows positively what it is all about. The sudden Cabinet upheaval in Italy can be and has been explained as in no sense derogatory of the dismissed ministers, but as in conformity with Mussolini's policy of rotation in office. The purpose, we are told, is to give all or many of the bright young men of Mussolini's organization experience in government and in different branches of government so as to build up "a ruling class."

For under all governmental forms except democracy, which now is anathema to so many, a class rules and all other classes are ruled.

However, the dismissal of Grandi from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs does not look so simple. We came to know this brilliant young man with the beaming black eyes and the flashing smile when he was here on a secret mission to Mr. Hoover, came to know him and to succumb to the charm of his personality. He has been described as the Talleyrand-in-the-making for the Napoleon of Italy. It has been assumed that he was in training under the supervision of the master for the succession when Mussolini passes. Thus his dismissal calls for special attention.

A Warning to Europe

That it would call for special attention is recognized in the elaborate stories from Rome assuring us that it does not mean a break between the two best known of the Fascists. But quite another interpretation comes from London, ascribed to "diplomatic circles" there.

The interpretation there is that Grandi has been dismissed by Mussolini in a passion because of the wholly unsatisfactory part played by Italy in the Lausanne conference, where the young diplomat represented her.

Grandi was conciliatory; and the hot-heads among Mussolini's followers are not strong for conciliation. Italy was left out of the most important negotiations, and Mussolini can resent a slight as quickly as any man in history. An Anglo-French agreement was reached without Grandi's knowledge, and France is not loved by Italy.

Thus Grandi is dismissed.

And Mussolini assumes the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, not out of compliment to Grandi, but as a warning to Europe.

Time will tell. Meanwhile many of us, with no sympathy with autocracies, will regret the humiliation, if such it is, of the sparkling young Italian of the romantic career.

Army Is in Possession of Berlin

Quite a different and more serious story is that in Germany. When Von Papen, of the war lord variety, was made Chancellor it was generally interpreted as a move toward militarism; as a step toward the crushing of both the republic and democracy in Germany; as a preliminary to the establishment in power of the element that contributed mightily to Germany's ruin, but with more power than ever in its hands.

The spectacular action of this week will strengthen that conviction. Prussia is under martial law. The Constitution has been set aside. The rights associated with liberty have been discontinued. The freedom of the press and of speech and of assembly has been denied. The Cabinet has been ousted by force. Public officials, duly elected, have been ejected by the military.

The army is in possession of Berlin. The people are "quiet," though "milling around in the streets," and this is not so remarkable! With mounted soldiers riding around and watching the "milling" and with machine guns mounted, the people have a way of being quiet—up to a certain point.

No Courts Under a Military Dictatorship

If they are not quiet they will be shot—and have been so warned. And nothing is such a sedative for excitement.

The reason given by Von Papen is that the regularly constituted and legally elected authorities in Prussia have not shown enough vigor in suppressing the Communists. To the world outside the perils of communism in Germany have seemed negative.

Bruening, former Chancellor, who had the confidence of the outside world to a much greater degree than Von Papen, and who was as remote from communistic sympathies as any man alive, has just denounced the military gesture for ousting and humiliating Dr. Severing, former Minister of the Interior, "who gave twelve years of his life to fighting for State authority and against communism."

It remains to be seen whether or not this high-handed setting aside of constitutional rights will drive the Socialists into the Radical camp. If continued long enough it unquestionably will.

Meanwhile, Bavaria is outraged and is preparing to test Von Papen's act in the Supreme Court.

But the same military power and autocratic theory can turn the court out at the point of the bayonet as well as ministers.

Take Your Choice

There is so much confusion and so much contradiction in Germany in the interpretation of the meaning of Von Papen's extraordinary act that we shall have to wait awhile to get the truth. Thus we hear that Hindenburg has resorted to this method to keep Hitler and the Fascists from power; and we have this other interpretation:

"Herr Hitler is rid of the Brauning Severing regime which for more than a year has blocked him in Prussia by virtue of the control of the police."

Take your choice.

Meanwhile, all the enemies of democracy and the republic in Germany are jubilant. Whether the dominant wish, on the Fascists' parts, of democracy loses and the republic goes to the scrap heap.

England Doing Good

But all these things which have been transpiring in Europe this week do not concern the people; for these things deal with government, and those responsible frankly think that people are made to be governed by force—not govern themselves.

However, these things are for the Italians and the Germans, and not for us to pass upon. Every nation has the right to any form of government it desires or to which it submits. Nothing that is done anywhere today for the suppression of the people will shock us, or even greatly interest us, as it would a few years ago, before it became fashionable in high financial circles and among the intelligentsia, which follows high finance, to jeer at the mass of the people and sneer at democracy.

Meanwhile a few of us find ourselves more and more convinced that England, more than any other nation in the world today, has a government responsive to the public will; and we observe that no country is doing better in digging in and digging out of the depression.
